2023 Annual Meeting on Law and Society

2023 Theme

Separate and Unequal

Between 1898 and 1901, the United States invented a new tradition of territorial expansionism with a corresponding constitutional doctrine to rule the Spanish ultramarine territories annexed during the War of 1898. Anchored on the prevailing racist ideologies of Anglo-American exceptionalism, the ensuing constitutional interpretation has been described as the “doctrine of territorial incorporation,” the “Third View,” the “Insular Cases doctrine” or the doctrine of “separate and unequal.” Central to this constitutional interpretation is the idea that the United States can selectively rule “unincorporated territories” as foreign territorial possessions that belong to but are not a part of the United States.

For more than a century, the federal government has used this doctrine to develop contradictory laws and policies. Examples abound. Although Congress has enacted legislation extending birthright citizenship to persons born in the U.S. Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas, other legislation and jurisprudence can treat these territories as foreign possessions in a domestic or constitutional sense. Presently, federal legislation ascribes a non-citizen nationality to persons born in American Samoa. Constitutional rights and federal laws can be withheld or applied differently in unincorporated territories.

The 2023 Law and Society Association’s meeting in Puerto Rico invites participants to experience a conference in a separate and unequal territory within the United States empire. Drawing on multiple disciplinary interpretations of the relationship between law and society, this meeting invites participants to reflect on the ways that the law normalizes discrimination and inequalities in unincorporated territories like Puerto Rico. We invite participants to reflect on how this year’s theme can become a lens to understand other relationships of power and visions of the relationship between law and society. At the 2023 Law and Society Meeting in Puerto Rico, we will place these urgent issues at the forefront of our engagement, drawing upon law, history, art, sociology, psychology, politics and culture to give serious attention to the past, while drawing lessons and hope for the future. Plenary sessions will examine how the nuances of the doctrine of separate and unequal can help us rethink how social, legal, and political structures perpetuate asymmetric relationships of power and inequalities in societies that invoke an ethos of democracy. By looking at how a democratic polity continues to affirm the separate and unequal rule of territories inhabited by citizens, we hope that the meeting will encourage participants to think about inequalities in new ways.

LSA President's Welcome to Puerto Rico

Welcome to Puerto Rico!! I know you join me acknowledging the Taino people on whose land our meeting is taking place along with all the indigenous communities of the Caribbean.

We are so happy to have you joining us for only our second in person conference post COVID. Our annual meeting provides an important corrective to the time we spend alone in our offices thinking and writing. I trust you will find support, camaraderie, and constructive feedback on your research. And, I hope everyone will enjoy the natural beauty of this amazing island. Take the time to find a sea turtle if you are able. You won't be sorry.

I hope you will leave San Juan with new insights about the ways in which coloniality continues to subjugate and racialize even American citizens. Our fantastic Program Committee chair, Charles Venator, together with his committee, has curated a set of presidential panels that I cannot recommend highly enough.

Even as an Americanist who studies race discrimination, my time with the Program Committee and decisions about the program itself has brought me face to face with my failure to really understand Puerto Rico and her citizens. The fact that multiple people have asked me, "why are there two international meetings in a row?" leads me to conclude that many of us have a lot to learn.

As I told my children every day when they left for school: have fun and learn lots!

Laura Beth Nielsen, president

Program Chair's Welcome to Puerto Rico

Welcome to the 2023 Annual Meeting on Law and Society in San Juan, Puerto Rico! Annual Meetings are a central aspect of the Law and Society Association's activities, providing an unparalleled opportunity for Law and Society scholars to connect and exchange ideas. We come together at a crucial time where we are living through the expansion of authoritarian, undemocratic and inequalitarian laws and policies throughout the United States and around the world. Like prior meetings, this year we gather to reflect on the dialectical relationship(s) between law and society, as we continue to recenter the relevance and value of empirical analysis to questions of justice.

We welcome individuals from over 60 countries. We also welcome the graduate students who will be taking part in this meeting and in our pre-conference Graduate Student and Early Career Workshop.

I want to thank the Law and Society Executive Office, who have kept the trains running and shaped the contours of this meeting, the CRN and IRC Chairs, and to our wonderful colleagues on the Puerto Rico Program Committee, all of whom worked tirelessly to put together the Program you see here.

And most of all, on behalf of the Program Committee, I welcome you to briefly walk with us in this meeting and hopefully to chart new paths for the future.

Our Aims

We meet in Puerto Rico, as the COVID-19 pandemic wanes, in the wake of an attempted coup-d'état in the United States, at a time when legal and political actors throughout the nation seek to enact more authoritarian laws to curtail women's rights, erase transgender citizens, and silence dissent in political institutions like state legislatures, and when others try to censure critical reflections on the nature of racism in the United States. 2023 also marks the 125th anniversary of the US annexation of Puerto Rico and the invention of a new territorial law and policy that permits the federal government to rule unincorporated territories as separate and unequal possessions. This year's theme, Separate and Unequal seeks to examine the antinomies or contradictions of a century plus constitutional interpretation that continues to enable the separate and unequal rule of U.S. citizens living in Puerto Rico and the other unincorporated territories.

The legal story of US nation-building is also a story of empire-building through territorial expansionism. This meeting's focus on the territorial doctrine of separate and unequal invites participants to reflect and experience the contradictions of US territorial law and policy and the unequal application of the law in unincorporated territories. Puerto Rico, like other unincorporated territories, is a place where Congress and the Supreme Court continue to selectively apply the Constitution in an unequal manner. We hope that you will explore how a variety of federal laws and policies addressing social, economic, and political problems are applied differently in Puerto Rico. We also hope that the specificity of US territorial law and policy can expand our visions of the relationships between law and society beyond the United States.

Among our many goals is not only to continue to shine a light on the contradictions of an empire that is willing to challenge the Russian empire's effort to annex Ukrainian territories while simultaneously refusing to resolve the status of its unincorporated territories and that of its citizens and nationals. I hope that this meeting can also help us reflect on how our fellow citizens and nationals continue to tolerate the undemocratic laws and policies used by the United States government to rule its colonial possessions such as Puerto Rico.

Sessions, Roundtables, Book Panels, and Plenaries

Puerto Rico's meeting is fabulous. We have over 2,200 participants in this year's meeting. It engages social, legal, cultural, economic, and environmental issues crucial to every country and the world as a whole. Panels include important discussions examining inequalities, freedom, and humanity, including critical examination of issues related to race, and colonialism, among a plethora of other topics. Most of the sessions take the familiar form of panels. The panel chair introduces panelists, who present their papers. A discussant comments on these papers; and the audience has their say as well. Some sessions will be crowded; some will have smaller audiences. All of them will try to leave room for questions and observations from the audience.

There will also be roundtable sessions in which scholars exchange ideas about a particular subject. Author Meets Reader sessions focus on recently published books on law and society. The meeting includes a Plenary Session, about the development of Territorial Policy in Puerto Rico, and President Nielsen's Presidential Address following the LSA award ceremony. The Program Committee has also selected a handful of sessions that take up the intellectual and policy developments in our field and related to the conference theme. Finally, professional development panels concern such matters as research publication, public outreach, and research methodology.

There are many ways to be involved and continue the conversation beyond the panels and plenaries, and beyond this conference. The LSA has created Collaborative Research Networks (CRNs), which cluster together groups of scholars who have interests and methodological approaches in common (listed at <https://www.lawandsociety.org/collaborative-research-networks/>). Many CRNs have open business meetings listed in the program, which is another way to connect with them. International Research Collaboratives (IRCs, <https://www.lawandsociety.org/international-research-collaboratives/>) are also sponsoring conference panels. IRCs are temporary groups of scholars, formed to pursue a specific scholarly project, with participation of global South scholars funded by a grant from the National Science Foundation to the LSA. We have 24 IRC's present at this conference!

Language and Accessibility

This is our third multi-lingual conference, after Mexico City in 2017 and Lisbon in 2022. Papers have been submitted in English and Spanish, given that Spanish is the primary language spoken in Puerto Rico, a legacy of the Spanish empire in the Americas. Although the conference will be conducted in English, the lingua franca of our discipline and a common language for many of us, some sessions by local participants will include presentations in Spanish. Whenever possible we will have translators. Our goal is to create a rich and inclusive conference that can incorporate scholars who are interested in sharing their research with all of us, but whose primary language is not English.

Although COVID-19 continues to impact us around the world, this year we will conduct the conference in-person. We will not use virtual technology to carry out panels or presentations.

Other Conference Events and Activities

In addition to the conference program, we have coordinated some special events. The LSA Welcome Reception will occur after the Presidential Address and LSA Award Ceremony on Thursday evening. Please check the program app for more information.

The Puerto Rican islands are not only one of the world's oldest colonial possessions but are a site where multiple cultures and traditions have interacted for centuries. Please take advantage of the travel guide and enjoy the San Juan metropolitan area. There is much to discover.

On behalf of the program committee, I hope that you enjoy this conference and also take this opportunity to experience the beauty of the Puerto Rican islands. Puerto Rico provides a unique opportunity to broaden your understanding of the complex relationships between law and society in a colonial context. Again, bienvenidos a todos.

Editor-in-Chief

Prof. Dr. Patricia Easteal

Message from the Editorial Board

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.

Author Benefits

-  Open Access Unlimited and free access for readers
-  No Copyright Constraints Retain copyright of your work and free use of your article
-  Thorough Peer-Review
-  No Space Constraints, No Extra Space or Color Charges No restriction on the length of the papers, number of figures or colors
-  Coverage by Leading Indexing Services Scopus, ESCI (Web of Science), RePEc, vLex Justis, CanLII, Law Journal Library, and other databases
-  Rapid Publication First decision provided to authors approximately 27.3 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 6.2 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the second half of 2022)

Aims and Scope

Laws (ISSN 2075-471X) is an open access journal, featuring scholarly work which examines critical developments in the substance and process of legal systems around the world. Laws encourages legal academics and criminologists to publish their empirical, doctrinal and/or theoretical research in as much detail as possible. Contributions that bridge traditional boundaries and challenge the injustices inherent in law are particularly welcome.

Laws publishes literature reviews, research papers, and short communications as well as Special Issues on a broad range of topical subjects such as gender-based violence, environmental law, and numerous human rights-related topics. The journal encourages authors to submit articles that are under 20,000 words in length including text, footnotes, and other accompanying material. Methodology details should be provided where appropriate so that results can be replicated.

Laws publishes across all relevant fields of research, including but not restricted to:

Human rights and law	Economic law
Gender and law	Education law
Religion and law	Criminal law
Media law	Intellectual property law
Refugee law	Environmental law
Health law	Fashion law
Policy and law
Justice

Editor-in-Chief

Prof. Dr. Gregor Wolbring

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that are of significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.

Law & Society REVIEW

LSA Collaborative Research Networks – CRNs

The Law and Society Association’s Collaborative Research Networks (CRNs) were originally developed, with the assistance of a grant from the National Science Foundation, to facilitate international research collaboration. CRNs have become a significant and integral component in Annual Meetings. Many organize several thematic sessions for each Annual Meeting as well as use the occasion to hold business meetings for members and prospective members. More information about each CRN, as well as times and locations of business meetings, can be found on our website at <https://www.lawandsociety.org/collaborative-research-networks/>

LSA International Research Collaboratives - IRCs

The Law and Society's International Research Collaboratives (IRC) are groups of law and social science researchers organized to undertake specific sociolegal research projects with a global reach. The objective is to strengthen law and social science scholarship generally and especially that of U.S. scholars by connecting them with theoretical, methodological, and policy discussions taking place among law and social science researchers world-wide.

The IRCs were selected in 2015 and have convened at the joint meeting of the Law and Society Association (LSA) and the Research Committee on the Sociology of Law (RCSL) in Mexico City in 2017, at the Law and Society Association Annual Meeting in DC in 2019, and the Global Meeting on Law and Society in 2022.

These IRCs are primarily supported by a grant from the U.S. National Science Foundation. More information about each IRC, can be found on our website at <https://www.lawandsociety.org/international-research-collaboratives/>

Annual Meeting Information

Types of Sessions Offered:

Participant-submitted session proposals tend to follow these formats:

Paper Sessions: These are traditional scholarly paper panels organized around a common theme.

Roundtable Session: A roundtable is a discussion-centered session organized around a common theme and does not have papers presented. These are the most flexible format offered at the Meeting and could include visual performances, films, and other innovative formats.

Author Meets Reader (AMR) Session: An AMR is a session in which discussion is focused on one or more recently published scholarly books. The session includes the author, a session chair, and readers who discuss the publication from their point of view.

New Books in the Field Session: Five or more new books in a field are briefly presented and discussed.

In addition, the Program Committee also organizes:

Plenary Session: This panel is based on the theme of the Meeting.

Professional Development Panels: These are created to enhance career development and opportunities within the field of socio-legal studies.

Abbreviation Key:

In addition to “AMR,” the following abbreviations are used in the Session Schedule:

CRN – Collaborative Research Network – LSA has 55 CRNs that provide an opportunity for interdisciplinary study. Scholars often experience difficulty finding and maintaining contact with those who have similar interests at other institutions. The Law and Society Association exists to overcome these barriers and to enable the growth and integration of the social study of law. As part of this effort the Association has encouraged the creation of CRNs to organize thematic sessions for the annual meetings and develop cross-disciplinary/cross-national research projects.

IRC – International Research Collaborative – Are groups of law and social science researchers that undertake sociolegal research projects with a global reach. These collaborations strengthen law and social science scholarship, especially among U.S. scholars, by connecting them with theoretical, methodological, and policy discussions taking place among researchers around the world. IRCs are a key component of the intellectual life of LSA, and have been instrumental in fostering and strengthening international and interdisciplinary scholarly networks.

Schedule Features:

Due to the LSA Privacy Policy, we do not print participant contact information. To connect with a presenter, please use the online networking features on the mobile app.

Law & Society Association Anti-Discrimination and Anti-Harassment Policy

1. LSA Commitment to a Culture Free of Discrimination and Harassment

The Law & Society Association (LSA) is committed to providing a safe, inclusive, and welcoming environment for all participants at its conferences, events, and virtual meeting places. LSA therefore strives toward a culture free of discrimination and harassment, especially discrimination or harassment on the basis of actual or perceived sex, gender identity, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, socioeconomic status, age, religion, national origin, citizenship status, criminal record, veteran status, or their intersection. Discrimination against or harassment of colleagues, students, or other conference participants undermines professional norms that promote scholarly exchange and professional development. Such discrimination or harassment also undermines equal access to and enjoyment of the scholarly activities of LSA. “Participant” in this policy refers to anyone present at LSA meetings or events, including staff, contractors, vendors, exhibitors, venue staff, LSA members, and all other attendees. The LSA policy is intentionally broader than most antidiscrimination laws to create an environment conducive to scholarly exchange.

One of the central tenets of law and society scholarship is that policies alone rarely guarantee social change. Therefore, we couple our anti-discrimination and anti-harassment policy with a request that all LSA participants proactively help to establish a culture of respect in which all participants feel welcome and included. Such a culture will not only help to ensure that all participants feel welcome but also provide the best possible environment for intellectual exchange and professional development. Specifically, we request that all participants be aware of situations, actions, or language that may have the effect of making others feel unwelcome or disrespected and, if necessary, take action when such situations, action, or language are observed. We encourage all participants to be reflective about their language and to strive to ensure that their biases, both explicit and implicit, are not contributing to an environment that may be perceived by some as hostile to their group.

LSA provides ombuds and intake officers [Please see contact information at the end of the policy] to assist any conference participant who witnesses or experiences harassment or discrimination. In the sections below, we define discrimination and harassment, we offer suggestions for helping to create a culture free of discrimination and harassment, and we elaborate procedures for contacting an ombuds and for filing a complaint.

2. The LSA Anti-Discrimination and Anti-Harassment Policy

LSA prohibits discrimination or harassment, including but not limited to discrimination or harassment on the basis of actual or perceived sex, gender identity, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, socioeconomic status, age, religion, national origin, citizenship status, criminal record, veteran status, or their intersection. This policy does not prohibit affirmative action, which in some situations may be necessary to avoid discrimination. LSA encourages anyone who experiences harassment or discrimination to use one of the complaint options outlined in this policy.

3. What is Discrimination?

Discrimination includes unequal treatment of participants on the basis of actual or perceived sex, gender, gender identity, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, socioeconomic status, age, religion, national origin, citizenship status, criminal record, or veteran status, or their intersection. Discrimination also includes actions or comments that have an unequal effect on participants on the basis of actual or perceived sex, gender, gender identity, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, socioeconomic status, age, religion, national origin, legal status, criminal record, or veteran status, or their intersection. Discrimination also includes harassment, as defined below, on the basis of actual or perceived sex, gender, gender identity, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, socioeconomic status, age, religion, national origin, citizenship status, criminal record, veteran status, or their intersection.

4. What is Harassment?

Harassment includes all actions or comments that are reasonably experienced as intimidating, harassing, abusive, derogatory, demeaning, or consistently marginalizing. Harassment also includes unwanted touching, harassing photography or recording, sustained disruption of talks or other events, and the real or implied threat of physical harm. Harassment is uniquely harmful when actions or comments are related to actual or perceived sex, gender identity, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, socioeconomic status, age, religion, national origin, legal status, criminal record, veteran status, or their intersection. Harassment based on gender, which has the effect of making someone feel demeaned or marking them as different in a negative way on the basis of their gender can constitute discrimination because of sex, and can but need not also include sexual harassment as defined below.

5. What is Sexual Harassment?

Sexual harassment is a form of harassment. Sexual harassment includes severe or pervasive unwelcome solicitation of physical or emotional intimacy or touching, as well as severe or pervasive commentary or nonverbal conduct that is sexual in nature, regardless of the gender of the complainant. To be sexual harassment, the harassment need not involve sexual desire.

6. What is the Standard for Evaluating Claims of Discrimination or Harassment?

Under this policy, discrimination and harassment are defined not by the intent of the perpetrator but rather from the perspective of a reasonable person in the complainant's position, using a preponderance of the evidence standard.

7. What to Do to Help to Create a Culture Free of Discrimination and Harassment

All participants can play a role in creating an environment free of harassment and discrimination by following the norms of professional respect that help to promote honest intellectual exchange and quality scholarship. Participants should be proactive about mitigating harm to other conference participants. Participants can be proactive by: (1) recognizing that the power differences inherent in academia and in society generally can inhibit less powerful parties such as students and junior scholars from voicing their objections to offensive comments or behavior; (2) recognizing that harassment may take the form of subtle forms of conduct, including unintentional conduct, that are harmful to groups that lack societal power; (3) taking affirmative steps to include others in conference conversations or activities; and (4) being an active bystander if you observe potential harm to another participant. If necessary, contact an ombuds via email or at the cell phone number that is provided following document to link you with the ombuds on duty or, if someone appears to be in imminent physical danger, contact security personnel.

8. What to Do if You Experience Discrimination or Harassment at any LSA Event

LSA provides two places to start to receive help regarding any type of discrimination or harassment prohibited by LSA policy. First, the ombuds of the LSA are available for informal confidential consultation about a wide range of concerns, including but not limited to discrimination or harassment. Second, the Discrimination or Harassment Complaint Procedure provides a more formal option for reporting and seeking formal resolution of incidents of discrimination or harassment. Each option is described separately in the next sections. The quickest way to report an incident and to get help addressing it, especially during an LSA meeting, is to contact an ombuds. However, participants are free to file a complaint without contacting an ombuds. The LSA ombuds may be contacted via email or at the cell phone number provided at each meeting and an intake officer for the Complaint Committee may be contacted via email at intakeofficer@lawandsociety.org. Contact info for the intake officers is also provided following this document.

9. The Role of the Ombuds

The ombuds play no role in LSA's formal complaint procedure, but can offer confidential guidance about what constitutes discrimination or harassment. The ombuds can also explain LSA options for reporting discrimination or harassment and outline other avenues for pursuing such a complaint, such as state or local government, human rights or law enforcement agencies, the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, or the U.S. Office for Civil Rights. If appropriate and if the complainant requests it, the ombuds may attempt conciliation. The ombuds cannot provide legal advice, but can offer support and guidance even if no further action is taken.

LSA recommends that the complainant first consult with the ombuds for clarification about the entire range of their options. This consultation is confidential and the details of such a conversation will not be reported to any administrator, officer, or committee of the LSA, except as required by applicable law. At all times, the role of the ombuds is entirely independent of any complaint you may decide to pursue through the following LSA complaint procedure. The ombuds will not keep any written records of complaints or consultations. Ombuds can be reached via email that will be provided and through cell phone numbers provided for each meeting or by asking for assistance from conference personnel. In the event that the ombuds is involved in or has a relationship with any party to the dispute, the ombuds will be recused after contacting another ombuds to address the issue.

10. The Discrimination or Harassment Complaint Procedure

Any participant in LSA may file a complaint regarding an incident that occurred at an annual meeting of the LSA or any other LSA event within the past two years. A complaint may be filed by contacting the intake officer for the Discrimination or Harassment Complaint Committee via email or at a cell phone number that is provided following this document. You can also send an email to intakeofficer@lawandsociety.org. In the event that any member of the Committee has a prior relationship to any party involved in the complaint or is named in the complaint, that person will be recused from participation. In most cases, complaints should be in writing but a complainant may relate a complaint orally.

The chair of the Complaint Committee will contact the individual whose conduct is at issue in order to hear his or her perspective. The Complaint Committee will also conduct an appropriate investigation, which includes interviewing both parties and any witnesses to the incident identified by either party. The Committee will write a brief report stating its finding and determination, and the factual basis for the decision. The Committee will also allow the respondent and complainant to respond to the report in writing. In reaching conclusions about whether harassment or discrimination has occurred, LSA will not look to U.S. federal case law because much law and society scholarship indicates that federal case law tends to find that only the most egregious of acts constitute harassment and tends to overlook meaningful evidence in assessing discrimination. Instead, the Committee will consider whether the discriminatory or harassing conduct would have negatively affected the experience or experiences at LSA for a reasonable person in the complainant's position, using a preponderance of the evidence standard. The Committee will then, if appropriate, determine sanctions. When a participant is found to have engaged in discrimination or harassment, the possible sanctions for that person are:

1. Issuing a warning to cease the discriminatory or harassing behavior and retaining a record of that warning in case of future violations;
2. Requiring the respondent to appear before the Complaint Committee and LSA President to learn about the consequences of their behavior and about likely consequences of similar behavior in the future;
3. Notifying the respondent's home institution of the violation;
4. Termination of current LSA conference participation and any LSA responsibilities or appointments held;
5. Barring the person from assuming any future governance positions within LSA;
6. Barring the person from participating in future LSA conferences or events; and/or
7. Revoking LSA membership

The Chair of the Complaint Committee will notify both parties of the Complaint Committee's decision. Should either party wish to appeal, the Executive Committee of the LSA and the Chair of the Complaint Committee will hear the appeal. Any party who is involved in the dispute or closely related to a party involved in the dispute would be recused. Decisions of the ad-hoc appeals committee are final.

11. Recordkeeping

The LSA's Executive Officer will prepare two annual reports. The first report will contain general information about the number and types of complaints received. No names will be included in this report. The report will be provided to the LSA board and will be available by request to any LSA member.

The second report will describe each complaint and action taken, with all names included. This report will be held as a confidential record in the LSA's national office and may be consulted only by members of the LSA Executive Committee and members of the Complaint Committee in the course of their official duties, or as otherwise required by law

12. Policy Review

LSA should conduct climate surveys of its membership and of conference attendees every 2 years to determine the prevalence of discrimination and harassment. LSA will review both climate survey data and complaint records every 2 years to identify any weaknesses in the policy and will make changes to bring LSA closer to having an environment free of discrimination and harassment.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 31

8:30 AM – 3:30 PM

CULIP Pre-Conference -

Date and Time: Wednesday, May 31, 8:00 AM – 3:30 PM

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Ceiba

Description: The Consortium's members meet annually, usually in conjunction with a relevant professional or scholarly meeting. Every other year, we hold a pre-conference workshop the day prior to the start of the Law & Society Association Meeting. Our meetings involve serious discussion about teaching law and justice and about creating and administering undergraduate programs in this interdisciplinary field. We exchange ideas and questions ranging from nuts-and-bolts issues to big discussions about this emerging interdisciplinary field. Separate registration required.

8:00 AM – 9:45 AM

Can Law Be Objective in a Separate and Unequal World? - 2477

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical A

Description: Justice is meant to be blind, and the law is supposed to be the tool for that equality. However, this aspiration hides that the law can also be a tool for power and that the blindness of justice can depend on... the Justice applying the law. If we all understand the law differently, there might as well be no law. And absent justice can hardly be blind justice. If we do not apply the law objectively, we create a separate and unequal society, depending on who delivers justice. But at the same time, if we already live in separate and unequal societies, how can law be objective if we have different understandings of how it should be applied? The answers to these problems depend on what objectivity means, which norms are applied, and the law's goals.

Detained: The History of US Law, Profit, and Immigrant Detention - 1721

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: This session explores the history of US immigration detention over the course of the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries. It traces the history of US detention with analyses that foreground the legal formations that structure the relationship between carcerality and profit, race, class, and politics. More specifically, these papers analyze the relationship between federal, local, and state law and revenue profit that undergirds US immigration detention by analyzing the history of bail, railroad technology, human agency/understanding, and the connections between private prison proliferation as well as federal and county prisons and detention centers. Each scholar pays sharp attention to the racial formations that emerge historically within the system of US immigration detention and the ever-changing nature of detention itself.

Encounters with the Criminal Legal System: Examining lived experiences of imprisonment, reentry, and restitution - 4489

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 7

Description: This panel examines how people experience the criminal legal system's punishments or remedies. The first paper discusses victims' experiences with restitution and compensation, offering victims' perspectives on justice and reform. The second paper examines incarcerated women's experiences with employment and education in the South, as well as their perceptions of opportunity. The third paper explores the embodied experience of prison transfers for incarcerated people, arguing that transfers are punitive. The final paper presents a case study of a reentry service provider, showing how the COVID-19 pandemic impacted the experiences of justice-involved clients. Together, these papers raise important questions about the nature of punishment and justice for various actors who encounter the criminal legal system.

Exploring the Intersections of Law, Religion, and Socio-economic Rights - 4479

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo A

Description: This panel brings together four diverse papers that delve into the complex relationships between law, religion, and socio-economic rights in the 21st century. The topics range from the European Court of Human Rights' approach to Islamic veil bans, to the conceptualization of consent as a normative power, the role of law in supporting systemic social movements, and the potential for a grassroots-inspired transnational social security framework. Through critical analysis and interdisciplinary perspectives, the panel seeks to address pressing legal and societal issues while fostering dialogue and reflection on the role of law and legal institutions in promoting social and economic justice. This panel promises thought-provoking and engaging discussions on the future of socio-economic rights and legal reform.

Gender Inequality & the Law - 4492

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 6

Description: This panel explores how gender inequality is constructed socially and legally, how they feed into each other, and attempts to offer some solutions. Panelists will discuss the relationship between anti-abortion legislation and the Religion Clauses of the First Amendment of the U.S, the ways legal gender kinds perpetuate inequality, how the legal system has shifted towards gender identity as the primary indicator of legal sex, and the legal and normative frameworks of the RuPaul's Drag Race (RPDR) and The Boulet Brothers' Dragulahow and how the shows 'drag up' legal language.

Law and More-than-human Societies I - 2735

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: How does law interact with and shape more-than-human societies? This panel explores the interactions between law and agentic properties and/or normativities of non-humans. It focuses on the value of experience, location, technique and world-views in understanding whether law has a role to play in more-than-human societies. It considers the role of law in creating and perpetuating environmental harms as well as the types of lawful relations or legalities that are necessary to build ecologically liveable and just futures. This panel focuses on how we view use rights to determine the essential nature of and the functional capacities of human and non-human beings in constructing and managing societies. The papers also explore how the law manages and configures humans and nonhuman beings and their relations with one another.

Law Making Racism - 4352

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: This panel investigate the history of law and racism in the United States, with papers ranging from the mid 19th to the mid 20th centuries. Each examines a law as a site conflict over the making and meaning of racism, and the distribution of racism's harms. In their particulars, the papers shed light on what at first glance appears as distinct histories of criminology, activism, urban space, enslavement, and public financing. Taken together, however, the papers identify that each of these areas of inquiry make visible the relationships between law and racism. Racism is simultaneously something legal institutions enact and something forced onto legal institutions by a racist social order, each reinforcing the other.

Mapping Prosecutorial Power Across Forms of Penal Practice, Policy and Rhetoric in the Americas - 3442

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): D

Description: Prosecutors hold a prominent role in the production of criminal punishment. While much has been said about their growing power (Bazelon, 2019; Sklansky, 2016) and contribution to a broader 'punitive turn' (Simon, 2007; Stuntz, 2011), less is known about the diffusion of models in comparative perspective (Langer, 2021). <ore critically, research has yet to document systematically how the local practice of prosecutorial power aligns with models of due process/crime control (Packer, 1964), and with other ambitions of reform, transparency, and efficiency (Frohmann; 2008; Campbell, 2012; Schoenfeld et al., 2018). Papers in this panel contribute to fill these critical gaps by providing fresh evidence about the evolving structure, management and operation of prosecutorial offices in Latin America and the United States.

Race, Disability, and Legal Exclusion - 4357

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): B

Description: The papers on this panel investigate a history of some people being excluded from political equality in the United States and Canada during the 19th and 20th century. Each offers a morally pressing example of injustices enacted on people through entirely legal processes. What becomes clear from the panel as a whole is that liberal democracies include ongoing exclusion of some people from important rights, including bodily autonomy. That exclusion is often treated as obvious and apolitical – the automatic result of committing a crime, belonging to a group viewed as a national enemy, belonging to a stigmatized racial group or having a disability. Furthermore, this exclusion occurs specifically through legal means, making law often an instrument for the perpetration of injustice.

Rethinking Public Defense - 1178

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo B

Description: This panel will address how the composition, role, and structure of public defense might be reconceived to better facilitate individual representation and respond to the systemic harms criminal enforcement generates. In Gideon v. Wainwright, the Supreme Court declared that the right to free counsel for the poor ensures that 'every defendant stands equal before the law.' Legal scholars have long noted how jurisdictions' refusal to adequately fund indigent defense undermines the Gideon ideal. Of late, legal scholars have also sought to better understand how criminal enforcement practices generate mass incarceration and other systemic harms. The panelists will present papers that put these two lines of scholarly inquiry in dialogue, centering indigent defense in broader accounts of how to rectify American criminal enforcement's excesses.

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 8, 9, 10

Description: This session will explore the varied conceptions of citizenship in the territories and Washington, D.C., including the claims and perspectives of Indigenous peoples. We have organized this session as a roundtable discussion which will build on the written work of all five participants. The roundtable will examine other ways of defining citizenship that are less constrained by the Constitution and that account for the ways in which conceptions of citizenship have historically served to exclude and subordinate. In particular, we will explore whether citizenship rights should instead be conceived as a 'bundle.'

An End to ICE?: Abolitionist Policies and Converging Discourses on Racism, Citizenship, and Immigrant Detention - 1544

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: This panel will explore the case of immigrant detention and the ideologies of racial citizenship that undergird it. Papers will discuss the effect and the punitive character of immigrant detention and its potential impact on communities when immigrant detention centers and prisons close. This panel will cover the impact of family detention including uncovering the incidents of sexual abuse and assault in detention. Additional work offers citizenshipcraft as a way to define the illusory logics, embedded in ideologies of western citizenship, that are wielded to justify immigrant detention as an institution that exists exclusively to uphold structures of racism and colonialism.

Beyond Non-Reformist Reforms: Loosening and Bracketing Attachments to Law Reform - 4319

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar A

Description: While law reform might seem to be a natural focus for exploring utopian legalities, CRN50 members often unsettle that assumption, bearing in mind that radical governance questions legal systems at a systemic level and prefigurative legality often interrogates and challenges the modalities of traditional law reform. This panel explores different practices of loosening attachments to, or bracketing out, law reform, while still struggling for justice. Pathways offered include reparative law reform in the context of conversion therapy, transformative justice in the context of abolition, utopian conceptions of police-free public safety, embodied practices of claiming temporal autonomy in the context of oppressed sanitation workers, and a direct call for utopian law reform in international law.

Constructing Legal Meaning & Gendering Education - 4493

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical C

Description: This panel explores how legal meaning is constructed and how education can/should be transformed to achieve gender equality. On constructing legal meaning panelists will discuss how Neal Stephenson's work offers constitutional scholarship an imaginary to explore alternative conceptualizations of jurisdiction, how an implicit legal recognition of the new hybrid public-private sphere is required to effectively address speech harms arising from the use of contemporary social media platforms, and how fictional island narratives and the legal fictions that arise out of such image in the XIX century have been read by jurists leading to novel legal formations. On gendering education, panelists will discuss why public schools should be required to have an LGBTQ+ inclusive curriculum.

De-constructing a Whistleblower: Interview with a Globally Recognized Post Apartheid Whistleblower - 2161

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): C

Description: Whistleblowing has taken momentum during the last two decades. Several stories of whistleblowers who have reported wrongdoings and faced retaliation have made it in the news. Inequality and abuses of whistleblowers are common stories and a motif that occurs in several instances. The well-being of the whistleblower is challenged, when they come forward to report wrongdoing: their mental health suffers; their financial status is diminished; their family peace and safety is harmed. In this roundtable, four experts on whistleblowers will interview Aris Danikas in a dialectic process. Aris blew the whistle on severe human rights abuses in the South Africa Apartheid regime. The purpose of this interview is to vividly demonstrate the challenges faced by whistleblowers, through a real case study, and propose recommendations.

Exceptional Imperialism: Native Nations, Indigenous Peoples & the U.S. Constitution - 1714

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 6

Description: LSA hosted in Borikén affords Indigenous scholars, and scholars working on Indigenous issues, a unique opportunity to discuss imperial oppression as experienced under U.S. law. Following the theme of 'Separate and Unequal,' this roundtable will discuss how the Constitution has been, and continues to be, used to both suppress and empower the political and cultural autonomy of Indigenous Peoples through the plenary power doctrine. This session will connect scholars from and who identify with what is now known as the United States, and the so-called 'territories' (Borikén, Guam & Samoa), to speak on histories and current controversies surrounding the status of Native Nations and Indigenous Peoples. We will also discuss our work, hopes of liberation from these doctrines, and what connects our communities beyond these legal frameworks.

Gender and the Legal Profession - 4498

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal E

Description: Gender persists to generate inequalities in the legal profession. This panel combines papers that explore this persistent problem. One paper employs affect control theory (ACT), lab-like data, and computer modeling to estimate the affective response of hundreds of interactions for both male lawyers and female lawyers and understand how men and women might react to these situations differently. Results indicate women experience significantly more gender deviance than their male colleagues in simulations of their everyday interactions. Thus, female lawyers may feel less like themselves when interacting with others in the legal profession, which may explain disparities in male and female career outcomes.

Harm and Resistance in Feminist Research: Entanglements of the Scholar-Activist - 1789

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo D

Description: Few texts offer innovative methodologies to study gender violence that promote people-centered interventions and blend activism and academics to inform community-minded scholarship. Researching Gender-based Violence: Embodied and Intersectional Approaches (NYU Press 2022) sought to fill this gap in its interdisciplinary collection of socio-legal scholars reflecting on how an embodied feminist methodology matters to gender violence research. This session expands that conversation toward the intersectional realities and violences of doing socio-legal research and being scholar-activists in separate but unequal spaces. The session focuses on scholar-activist entanglements to address carceral inequalities, surveillance, colonizing legacies, and anti-blackness impacting gender violence research, interventions, justice and empowerment.

International judicial cooperation after Covid 19: principle of mutual recognition of foreign decisions in matters of family law - 1659

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: The multifaceted crisis caused by the Covid-19 pandemic is a rich example of the important role to be played by international administrative and judicial cooperation in the various spheres of family law. One way to reap the benefits of these new judicial cooperation systems would be to increasingly rely on the principle of mutual recognition. This roundtable intends to revisit the pillars of this principle in light of the new challenges and opportunities brought by the COVID-19 pandemic. In doing so, it will adopt a comparative and thematic perspective. It will first look at how it manifests in selected jurisdictions in family law. It will then look at the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on the principle, its interpretation and application on a global scale.

Nothing About Us Without Us: New Trends in Canadian and American Disability Rights Law - 1272

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical B

Description: Nothing About Us Without Us: New Trends in Canadian and American Disability Rights Law In this international panel, we explore cutting-edge issues in contemporary disability rights law. Ranging from legal challenges in the educational sector to promote inclusion through litigation or advocacy to systemic barriers faced by workers with disabilities to the impact of climate change in the coming years and the role of the carceral state in perpetrating violence against people with disabilities, this diverse panel seeks to find ways to empower people with disabilities and foster a world inclusive for all. In the best of the Law and Society tradition, we use a variety of methods to engage with the perspectives of people with disabilities from the bottom up to ensure that their voices are heard, and society takes their needs into account.

Popular International Law - 2349

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: International legal argument is today a staple of popular political discourse. This roundtable will explore the nature and dynamics of these popular forms of IL, asking to what extent they differ from earlier forms. How do the uses of IL by movements protesting NATO's wars or Israeli settler colonialism compare with earlier debates about Vietnam or appeals to the ius gentium by 18th-century critics of empire? Did the late 19th-century professionalisation of IL simply mark an interregnum in the longue durée of popular IL or can we discern the historical specificity of its shifting forms? Finally, we will debate the politics of today's popular IL. Should we look hopefully on a democratization of IL discourse, or might this juridification of politics and protest have a dark side?

Publishing in Socio-Legal Friendly Journals: Meet the Editors and Get Advice on Publishing - 4333

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo C

Description: Are you interested in publishing socio-legal research? This panel brings together editors from Law and Policy, Law and Social Inquiry, Law and Society Review, and Political and Legal Anthropology to discuss best practices for publishing your research in socio-legal friendly journals. Editors will offer suggestions and advice on best practices for getting an article published in socio-legal friendly journals. The editors will elaborate on how to frame your research, what should be included in your cover letter, and how to respond to reviewers of your research during the review process. It will also be an opportunity to ask questions and unlock the 'black box' for how to get your article published.

Regulatory Law Through Diverse Methodologies - 4500

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal G

Description: One paper argues that the US federal government should revisit cost-benefit analysis (CBA) to incorporate an equity-based policy lens when reviewing proposed agency regulations and durably protect the country's most vulnerable populations. A second article explores how governments responded and should respond to increasing litigation resulting from COVID19. It also explores if litigation is the best resource for certain controversies or if ADR is better suited. A second paper reports and analyzes empirical data regarding consumer complaints of digital platforms and its impact on the regulatory process. A third paper combines existing scholarship on legal consciousness with social psychology and the political economy of advanced capitalist democracies to identify how legal consciousness is constructed.

Separate and Unequal: Sex Work during the COVID-19 Pandemic - 4411

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal A

Description: The COVID-19 pandemic has adversely affected people globally. Still, we are only beginning to understand the transnational and long-term effects on sex workers. In this panel, scholars present research findings on the effects of the pandemic on sex workers in Cambodia, Canada, the Caribbean, India, and Latin America. During the pandemic, sex workers have experienced significant income loss, food insecurity, decreased access to digital tools and medical attention, and face life-threatening safety issues such as increased violence. At the same time, the authors examine how sex workers navigate these times with resiliency using mutual aid and various forms of community-based support. The session also has critical implications for carrying out research with sex workers during the ongoing pandemic.

The Coloniality of Migration and Legal Imaginaries of Inclusion - 3010

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: The papers in this panel analyse the coloniality of migration by exploring the concepts of human rights, democratic representation, freedom of movement and citizenship. Despite longstanding research on migration and state violence, conventional disciplinary and positivist scholarship continues to foreclose an in-depth interrogation of the impact of race and colonialism. Restrictive doctrinal views lack sensibility as to what undergirds and resides beyond the legal archive. Crucial sources of information, histories and types of knowledge are placed outside the remit of the legal sphere. By interrogating legal imaginaries of inclusion and other fictions of the law through constructs such as citizen, human, migrant, refugee, indigeneity, we examine the contestations and contradictions inherent in the field.

The Legal and Social Construction of Victims and Offenders - 4501

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: this panel explores how varied frameworks and actors within the legal system and beyond construct ideas of 'victims' and 'offenders.' Papers examine the role of judicial discretion in imposing long-term sentences for those convicted of serious sexual offences; a federal drug court's effort to transform criminal defendants into law abiding, sober, employed, and responsible individuals, and legal actors' implementation of best practices in sexual assault case-handling. Other papers point to the significance of extralegal arenas in constructing legal subjects by examining topics like media coverage of Black women's risk for intimate partner violence, and the incorporation of neuroscientific evidence in the sentencing of children and adolescents. Collectively, these studies highlight the dynamic and ongoing production of legal subjects.

The Political Economy of Constitutional Rights - 4484

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo A

Description: This panel addresses the political economy of constitutional rights. It concerns how the distribution and enactment of rights are shaped by - and constitutive of - ways in which politics and economics relate and interact in society. The papers discuss the imposition of punishment in prisons by public authorities under unconstitutional conditions; the US 14th Amendment's disqualification clause which bars individuals from office for fomenting an insurrection; the role of trust and legitimacy in debates on core constitutional rights, such as the right to private property; the (biased?) role of legislatures in processes of budget law-making; and how law and public policy construct systemic forms of inequality and exclusion in cities through the provision of essential public goods and services.

The Return of the Master: Silencing, “race neutrality,” and “the objectivizing point of view” - 4495

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 7

Description: This panel deals with how the reproduction of racial inequality requires silencing the point of view of those who protest against it (Loor), how legal systems are contributing to increasing inequality by advancing notions of 'race neutrality' that promote and reinforce the present-day effects of past discrimination (McNeal), and how the philosophical foundations of the law allow this by emphasizing a 'conceptual analysis' that fails to account for the point of view of the participants and requires a more substantive methodological reorientation (Cortés-Monroy).

United States Territorial Policy in Puerto Rico: From the Northwest Ordinance to Self-determination - 4099

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo B

Description: It is necessary to consider the historical development and objectives of the territorial policy of the United States since the 18th century as well as its legal manifestations across time. Political, economic and cultural factors at the end of the 19th century modified the territorial policy and produced the legal construct of unincorporated territories, sanctioned in the 'insular cases' of the early 20th century. Over seventy years ago, Congress authorized Puerto Rico to adopt a constitution for its local government, but the territorial/colonial nature of the relationship was not modified. The panelists will consider the different options of independence, statehood or free association, and procedural alternatives of self-determination by the people of Puerto Rico to achieve a new relationship not based on dependence and subordination.

Vulnerable Asylum Seekers - 4510

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 4

Description: Ours is a world of mobility, displacement, and resettlement shaped by a global legal infrastructure of mobility. While this infrastructure is comprised of laws, policies, and official actions, much of what states do vis-à-vis immigrants bears an uneasy relationship to legal ideals and human flourishing. Policies in the Europe and the United States inadequately or inappropriately account for the vulnerability of asylum seekers. Pregnant immigrants in the United States and Canada face multiple forms of liminality, including some exacerbated by the likely future citizenship of their fetuses. For community-based public-safety agencies serving Latinx members already present in one large Midwestern city, the arrival of COVID 19 compounded challenges associated with immigration status and language barriers.

Words Matter: Policing, law, literature, political theory. - 4496

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: This panel gathers four papers which look at the importance of words and language in diverse areas: (1) police interrogation: police regularly take advantage of ambiguous linguistic expressions of a desire for counsel (Mason) (2) in introducing bias in a court: courts allow the activation of implicit bias through particular types of communication (Greenlee) (3) literary representations of reality: Charles Dickens counterposed the situation of a deaf and blind child who had no language to the situation of prisoners in solitary confinement (Hibbard), and (4) in political theories. (4) Laclau's theory of populism needs to reintroduce the subject as an entry point through which to diagnose the rhetoric individuals are caught up in.

A Critical Appraisal and Evaluation of Ethnic minority rights in Nigeria through multiple lenses of law, climate change, education and health equity - 3804

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 8, 9, 10

Description: Nigeria, is an ethnically and linguistically diverse country with over 350 ethnic groups and many languages. Using multiple lenses of law, education, widening participation, climate change and health equity, we bring clarity to the following questions? Has the emphasis on a federal character principle achieved success in Nigeria? Is there a unified government policy to bridge the gap in education between the majority and minority tribes? How can climate policies be implemented to allow indigenous and ethnic minorities to maintain their political and cultural status on their traditional lands? How do social inequalities within the health sector affect ethnic minorities? Finally, does the Nigerian legal system enable inequality and a culture of 'One Nigeria' but a separate and different treatment for ethnic minority groups?

Business Ethics: What Everyone Needs to Know - 2199

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): E

Description: In today's turbulent business climate, business ethics are more important than ever. Surveys of employees show that misconduct is on the rise. Organizations face pressure to design and implement effective ethics and compliance programs. As a result, businesses and businesspeople are increasingly worried that their conduct might cross lines that put their wealth and reputations at risk. 'Business Ethics: What Everyone Needs to Know' explains what those lines are, how not to cross them, and what to do when they are crossed. The book surveys materials from moral philosophy, behavioral science, and corporate law, and shares practical advice. It covers a wide array of essential topics including the legal status of corporations, major ethical traps in modern business, negotiations, whistleblowing and liability, and best practices.

Description: Societies in Asia and the Americas may seem to have nothing in common given their particularities; however, many countries in these two regions share similar historical and political experiences (e.g. dictatorships, revolutions, democratic mobilizations, civil rights or human rights problems, corruption etc.) and interact more and more pushed by economic and cultural globalization. Nevertheless, these geographically diverse societies, although very different in their current legal and political cultures, may also share constitutional and democratic values. This session intends to bring together scholars engaged in studying the evolvement of constitutional features, either regarding constitutional law or constitutional theory, related to these regional foci.

Description: This panel focuses on the varied meanings that are attached to sex, gender, reproduction, and family and generated in different contexts, including the law, courtrooms, and global fertility markets, and explores contestations around these meanings that are constantly challenged and negotiated by different actors. The papers examine the ways that a) courts approach equal protection based on sex, b) the gay and lesbian rights movement actively negotiates sexual orientation anti-discrimination laws, and c) gender, responsibility, and complicity interact to sustain a particular understanding around family and domesticity. The papers further engage the questions of kinship and sexuality, mainly with respect to reproductive technology, and examine the role of religion on gender/sexual orientation norms, with a focus on illiberal contexts.

Equally Separate? Towards a Research Framework on Global Mobility Law - 2872

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: Throughout history, populations, territories and law(s) have been shaped by different forms of human mobility. Today, however, few issues are subject to such stringent and unequal legal controls which, by intent or consequence, produce different types of immobility. Yet, there is, so far, no common normative framework for studying the different aspects of human mobility law. Consequently, we know little about the cumulative effects of entangled international, transnational, and domestic mobility regulations, how different regimes interact, and what legal topographies emerge from these dynamics. This Roundtable seeks to take up this challenge by asking: what might a research framework on global mobility law look like?; how do we overcome existing scholarly divides ?; what alternative perspectives on mobility can such a framework provide ?

Gender and Political Economy Roundtable I: Revisiting Distributive Analysis - 2649

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Flamboyán

Description: This panel seeks to revisit distributive analysis and what it means for Gender and Political Economy (GPE), as part of the GPE International Research Collaborative. The GPE IRC, and this roundtable, seek to explore the relationship between gender, sex discrimination law, the regulation of sex work, social exclusion of female workers, privatization of social welfare functions, and neoliberalism. This panel seeks to theorize the gap between the law on the books and the law in action and how it distributes power and opportunities. Using comparative case studies and different sets of analytical tools, the panel articulates sets of methods or priors that help clarify the terms of engagement. The panel also assesses the role of informality and the way it should be assessed in analysis of law and GPE.

Law and the Uses of History: Ideology, Jurisdiction and Agendas - 4143

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: Debates about how to 'properly' use the past and our record of it are increasingly charged not only by differences in disciplinary culture, but also by competing visions of scholarship's political salience. When scholars choose how to use the (legal) past, they also enact claims about what law is and has been, who it belongs to, and who may play a role in its making. Beyond scholars, a throng of institutions and actors—courts and legislatures, experts and activists—deploy narratives about law's past and models of legal change to serve various agendas. People do things with narratives of legal change; stories about law's past act. How do courts mobilize history? And what political imaginaries do those uses empower? How do 'law and development' narratives ascribe agency and allocate legitimacy? Whose histories are used to make law?

Separate and Unequal: How Judges Reshape Litigation in Attempts to Deliver Justice - 4413

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): B

Description: Far from being neutral and disimpassioned, many judges approach their work with specific ideas about how justice may be served. On and off the bench, Black state court judges in the US represent Black people and their interests. Elsewhere, judges innovate to create separate and unequal procedures for class action 'fairness hearings,' and apply 'rough justice' in situations where adequate remedies may be unattainable. Governments too may ask judges to implement legislation such as India's Protection of Children from Sexual Offenses Act or the US Indian Child Welfare Act, which call for distinct procedures and considerations. This panel critically examines the actions and behaviors of judges who adopt unique procedures and who otherwise reshape litigation in order to affect a sense of justice.

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: The term community is a polyvalent word. As an umbrella term it is a normative ideal, a spatiotemporal practice, and an institution which includes and excludes. This panel engages critically with 'community' across a range of sites. Papers discuss the overlaps between community-based crime prevention and vigilantism in gentrifying North American cities; how entrepreneurial 'solidarity' in an 'open' prison in Uruguay is fostered through 'community'; how asylum seekers and undocumented migrants in the US are subjected to 'non-custodial' incarceration in communities; the work of 'community' in legitimating populist forms of vigilante violence in South Africa's marginalized poor former Black townships; and the role of NGOs and other community-based actors in response to the increasing migration flows to the Canary Islands.

Theorizing Transnational Legal Ordering in a Changing Global Context - 4324

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 5

Description: This panel combines theoretical assessment of the 'transnational' and its 'paths' with empirical studies on the trade regime and China, refugee policy and the rule of law, and religious freedom in the Americas. These empirical studies and conceptual arguments dynamically and recursively help orient study of the transnational today.

Unauthorized Love: Mixed-Citizenship Couples Negotiating Intimacy, Immigration, and the State - 1072

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: For mixed-citizenship couples, getting married is the easy part. The US Supreme Court has confirmed the universal civil right to marry, guaranteeing every couple's ability to wed. But the Supreme Court has denied that this right includes married couples' right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness on US soil, creating a challenge for mixed-citizenship couples whose individual-level rights do not translate to family-level protections. 'Unauthorized Love' offers a critical look at US family reunification law and its consequences as experienced by 56 mixed-citizenship American families. In examining the experiences of couples struggling to negotiate intimacy under the constraints of immigration policy, López argues for a rethinking of citizenship as a family affair.

Access to Justice for Vulnerable and Excluded Populations - 3765

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 8, 9, 10

Description: The objective of this roundtable is to bring together scholars who are interested in discussing the perception of access to justice for vulnerable and excluded populations. The focus is to discuss how indigenous people, climate refugees, and ethnic groups, perceive the means of conflict resolution inside and outside the courts and access these spaces based on their cultural, social, and political capital. The processes of exclusion are the result of discriminatory behaviors carried out by dominant groups, inside and outside the territories of the nation-states. In 2023, the Law & Society Association's meeting has as its theme the need to discuss the practices that promote the exclusion of vulnerable populations. Accepting this invitation, this roundtable also engages in looking at these exclusions from a Southern-global perspective.

Accountability and Legitimacy in Public Policy - 4363

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical B

Description: This panel brings together three papers exploring the challenges of accountability and legitimacy in different areas of public policy. The first paper focuses on legislative politics and examines quantitatively references to target groups in Spanish bill amendments. The second paper applies process-tracing to investigate the conditions for successful campaign finance reform in US federal elections. The final paper raises important questions about law enforcement practices, through an in-depth look at the handling of complaints against police officers in New York.

Author Meets Reader Session for 'This is Our Freedom: Motherhood in the Shadow of the American Prison System' - 1049

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Flamboyán

Description: In This is Our Freedom, Mondé examines how formerly incarcerated mothers navigate the complex journey of rebuilding their lives, while under the surveillance of carceral institutions. Based on 70 in-depth interviews, across three research sites, Mondé examines how women make sense of their roles as mothers and their status as justice-involved women. Drawing up an intersectional framework that finds its roots in Du Bois' notion of double consciousness, the author's theory of duality at the margins captures how women simultaneously resist and defer to powerful state actors. In both strategic and informal ways, women challenge the formal accounts about their criminality, while asserting their humanity as women and as mothers. This work complicates notions of power, motherhood and criminality, while critiquing the criminal legal system.

Autocratic Legalism I - 3929

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: This panel emphasizes the role of law in processes of 'democratic backsliding' based on studies from Poland, the US, Brazil, and Mexico. Political scientists, constitutional scholars, and civil society activists now grapple with a new phenomenon: leaders with antidemocratic predispositions rise to power through elections and, while in the office, act to undermine the foundations of the very liberal-democratic systems that enabled their election. Authors on this panel are contributors to the Project on Autocratic Legalism (PAL), which investigates how law is used by those rising autocrats to consolidate power – or how law can be used to resist such moves – and the nascent project on Global Resistance to Authoritarian Diffusion (GRAD).

CRN33 Law, Gender, Family and Inequality in East Asia and Beyond - 3222

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical A

Description: This session examines the crossroads of intersectional relationships among law, gender, family, sexuality, and inequality in East Asia and beyond. The first paper focuses on the comparative study of the legal practice of family law in Japan and China in the first half of the twentieth century and its social consequences (Weilin Xiao , Yale, USA). The second paper examines the impact of the legalization of same-sex marriage in Taiwan (Ruey-Yun Hung , McGill, Canada). The third paper looks at the victimization and transitional justice in Taiwan, as it was ruled by the authoritarian regime for almost four decades (Yi-Li Lee, Tsing Hua, PRC). The fourth paper examines the evolving role of lawyers/litigation and of courts in Japan focusing on the ongoing lawsuits over the right of same-sex couples (Takeshi Akiba, Waseda, Japan).

This session showcases the necessity for, and eclecticism of judicial innovation, by both judges and scholars. This session presents research on various innovations at courts in Japan, Brazil, Canada and Mexico, which seek to improve enforcement of rights. Judicial innovations include judges who rejuvenate traditional legal doctrines for new contexts and refine interpretative techniques to resolve linguistic divergences in bilingual legislation. Lawfare: Institutional Violence in Latin America - 1590

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: Despite the denunciations, the Lawfare phenomenon persists in Latin America, with more complex contours. If in previous years, discussions revolved around the use of the Judiciary to persecute political opponents, as in the case of the lawsuit against former Brazilian President Lula da Silva, at present, Lawfare has been developing in other spheres of the power, like second-level government bodies, which distort their institutional objectives, to start to weaken sectors considered uncomfortable for government plans. An example is the Brazilian case of the Fundação Nacional do Índio, which, instead of safeguarding the rights of indigenous people, has adopted a policy that makes them even more vulnerable, showing how democracy and human rights in Latin America continue to be under serious threats.

The Constitutionalization of Human Rights Law: Implications for Refugees - 1549

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: This book analyzes how cause lawyers representing refugees use constitutionalized human rights law to close the gap between the law on the books and how that law is implemented. It is context-sensitive, focusing on five particular countries (Colombia, Mexico, South Africa, Uganda, and the United States) in demonstrating how such lawyers adapt creatively to the, social, political, and legal contexts within which they operate in order to achieve that goal. The book develops a theory of a continuum of ever-more ambitious methods through which cause lawyers seek to put constitutionalized human rights law into action that benefits refugees. The book makes important contributions to three strands of socio-legal literature: human rights treaty effectiveness, refugee law, and cause lawyering.

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 4

Description: This roundtable examines different case studies in the forthcoming book, The Right Against Rights: The Power of Anti-Rights Movements in 21st Century Latin America. Latin America is home to right-against-rights movements that have grown in numbers, strength, and influence in recent years. New anti-rights groups are intent on blocking, rolling back, and reversing social movements' legislative advances by obstructing justice and accountability processes and influencing politicians across the region. The Right Against Rights contains chapters empirically exploring the breadth, depth, and diversity of a new wave of anti-rights movements in Latin America. It details why they are different from previous movements in the region and why it is of vital importance that we study, analyse, and understand them in a global context.

Torn Apart: How the Child Welfare System Destroys Black Families – and How Abolition Can Build a Better World by Dorothy Roberts, and Prosecuting Poverty, Criminalizing Care by Wendy A. Bach - 3023

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo D

Description: After 20 years focused on ending racism and improving outcomes for families in the child welfare system, Dorothy Roberts concludes that only abolition of the system, which she names family policing, will stop the destruction of Black families. Wendy Bach analyzes a punitive, misguided policy in Tennessee that resulted in the prosecution of substance-addicted pregnant women for a newly created crime of fetal assault, entangling women in the carceral state with drastic consequences. Roberts's targets of family destruction are disproportionately Black; Bach's targets of criminalization are predominantly white. Roberts employs the demand for abolition; Bach does not. These reproductive justice books raise profound questions about abolition, racism, intersectionality, and needed structural changes.

Date and Time: Thursday, June 1st, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo B

Description: Presidential Address: 'Relational Rights: A vision for Law and Society Scholarship' This presentation offers a vision of the possibilities for law and society as an intellectual movement that is: true to our roots of combining normative and empirical scholarship to advance justice; builds on our nearly 60 years of foundational growth; and blossoms into a range of new possibilities for our vision of law and society scholarship. Using what I call a 'relational rights' theoretical approach, I examine the possibility of bridging individual and institutional analyses drawing on analysis of law's cultural objects. To elaborate this vision, I will draw on three areas of law and society research: sexual consent on campus; gun rights debates; and mass incarceration. I hope to forward a new vision for what law and society can be in the world with an emphasis on empirical rigor, positive imaginings, and public presence. Alternative Spaces: New Conversations for Feminist Legal Geographies - 2323

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal E

Description: Recent work in legal geography has taken an explicitly feminist approach, led by the work of Brickell and Cuomo (2019). Their work was motivated by a curious lack of feminist theory within legal geography. They noted that 'sensitivity to difference, the gendered character of law, and its (everyday) material sites and discourses' were seemingly absent in key works on spaces of law and spatial injustice (Cuomo and Brickell, 2019). Building upon this, this panel seeks to ensure that other marginalised voices are heard alongside, and in interaction with, gendered experiences of law, space, place and power. The papers aim to further advance feminist legal geographies by considering what happens to core concepts and methods in legal geography when understood through new lenses and/or when applied to new material-discursive spaces.

Description: Sex workers sit at the unique crux of many intersecting institutional and cultural issues, facing tremendous stigma, and often have multiple overlapping marginalized identities. In the US and globally, sex worker activists and advocates are hard at work creating multifaceted policy models to address those many issues. Beyond the criminalization of adult consensual sex work in most of the world, there are obstacles that sex workers face in every facet of society - within banking, employment, education, parenting, healthcare, and so on. Policy confronting these issues can take many forms - legislation needs to address discrimination in the workplace, educational institutions, law enforcement interactions, family courts, etc. We will bring our individual perspectives & experience to discuss the details and merits of these varying approaches.

Cutting Through Complexity in Disability Law: Advocacy, Remedies, and Economic Burdens - 4316

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal C

Description: This panel will address some of the complexities American disability rights law presents in areas such as employment, education and the tort system. Some of the complexities arise from political compromises that arose during the course of legislation, which were necessary for passing of these disability civil rights laws. Such complexities include the explicit withholding of funding for the education of students with disabilities in the US territories under the IDEA; the invisible 'soft costs' that land on front-line workers due to the ADA's accommodation mandate; and the subminimum wage for employees with disabilities under the Fair Labor Standards Act. Other complexities arise from the socio-legal construction of disability that stands at the heart of disability rights law.

Deception in Legal History (CRN 15 & CRN 44) - 1434

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 6

Description: This panel explores lying, cheating, and scamming in 19th and 20th-century legal history. It features deception associated with fire, sex, and drugs, and in various parts of the English-speaking world. Catherine Evans explores the racialized dynamics of fire and arson in the decades after emancipation in the British Caribbean. Susanna Blumenthal traces the rise of the 'pathological liar' typology in the US circa 1900 applied to the delinquent girl whose implausible stories blurred the boundary between lies and illness. Binyamin Blum follows the crime of 'rape by deception' from mandate Palestine into modern-day Israel. Sam Daly reveals a little-known phase of the transnational drug trade: the mid-20th-century push of narcotics by British suppliers into West Africa, which also involved questions of fraud.

Empire and American Institutions: How the Outward Projection of US Imperial Power Shaped Domestic American Law and Legal Thought - 3491

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 5

Description: Between the mid-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries, the United States transformed from an introverted cluster of states into a far-flung global empire. What effect did this outward-facing transformation have on the internal development of American political and legal institutions? Although the architects of American empire endeavored to erect bulkheads between the spheres of the international and the domestic, our roundtable contends that these lines dissolved in unpredictable ways, triggering an unwitting recursive process of institutional importation. This session gathers scholars of law, history, and legal history to explore empire's effect on domestic models of presidential governance, the rights of citizens, the justice system, federalism, international law, and other areas.

Gender, Equality and Social Justice: Anti Trafficking, Sex Work and Migration Law and Policy in the EU - 3324

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar A

Description: In this Author-Meets-Reader session a panel of readers will share their thoughts on Sharron FitzGerald's and Jane Freedman's new book: Gender, Equality and Social Justice: Anti Trafficking, Sex Work and Migration Law and Policy in the EU. Readers will share their insights, critiques and questions with the authors who will respond to each reader in turn. Attendees will also have an opportunity to pose questions to the authors and readers. The book examines EU policies relating to migration, sex work and anti-trafficking efforts through a feminist analytical framework and maps how the EU's approaches are shaped by various internal and external actors, including non-governmental organizations.

Global Colonialism and Puerto Rico in Present Tense: On Oppression, Law and Decolonial Futures - 2054

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: Can law enable a real process of decolonization for Puerto Rico? This session brings together scholars engaging with this question in the wake of PROMESA, the FOMB, and the US Supreme Court rulings in Sanchez Valle, Franklin California Trust, Aurelius and Vaello Madero. This panel interrogates whether law -understood broadly and including the International, Federal, and National legal systems-, can still be a vehicle for the decolonization of PR. Scholars on this panel critically engage with legalistic arguments suggesting that civil rights discourses, legal mobilizations, and changes to the Insular Cases doctrine and to the US constitutional framework, can render a democratic process of political inclusion of PR and Puerto Ricans within the US political and legal system.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: Consensus views on white-collar crime embrace an apparent paradox--that white-collar crime is both overcriminalized or underenforced. This roundtable will take Miriam Baer's newly published book, 'Myths and Misunderstandings of White-Collar Crime,' as its launching point. Participants will ask what features of the criminal code or prosecutorial practice give rise to the paradox and what, if anything, is to be done.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 3

Description: The struggle by Indigenous peoples to assert their rights to self-determination and sovereignty are frequently hindered by the mechanisms and structures of the nation. This panel considers the spaces where Indigenous peoples seek to assert rights over their traditional knowledges and cultural heritage in the context of the Native American Graves Repatriation Act (NAGPRA) and against the threat of biopiracy. The position of the State in relation to Indigenous claims is also considered in the context of the 1969 White Paper in Canada and the selective application of Covid19 vaccination in Israel/Palestine.

Rethinking Rights and Protection: (Forced) Displacement of Indigenous Peoples, Undocumented Migrants, Refugees, and Asylum Seekers - 4341

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: Belonging to a people, culture, or history legitimizes personhood, a demonstrable act of equality, diversity, and inclusion. Globally, states' responses to migration flow, sometimes framed as 'migration crises,' are characterized by capricious judicial outcomes and inequitable burden sharing which puts refugees into extra-legal spaces causing humanitarian disasters. The papers in this session assess the various ways that human rights laws are applied differently to displaced (Black African) Indigenous Peoples; examine hostile policies and laws that exclude undocumented migrants and asylum seekers from accessing basic services; critically evaluate the public-private model of the U.S. refugee resettlement; and advance a rights-based conception of migration by challenging the maintenance of a limited, privileged refugee category.

Separate and Unequal Spaces in Migration - 2721

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo A

Description: This session explores 'separate and unequal' spaces in migration. Anita Sinha examines how the classification of migrants confers a separate and unequal status to internally displaced persons. Raquel Aldana argues that a myopic focus on providing permanent status to refugees prolongs the sense of being separate and unequal in the host country, whereas providing temporary status can promote more efficient social and economic integration. Fatma Marouf considers the separate and unequal space of constitutional rights in borderlands, calling for heightened protections to guard against increasingly invasive and discriminatory surveillance technologies. Huyen Pham and Van Pham analyze how subfederal policies affect migration decisions within the U.S., shedding light on how some jurisdictions work to create separate and unequal spaces.

Separate but Equal? Education, Disability, Cultural and Immigration Rights in Africa - 4314

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 7

Description: This panel engages the various ways in which the systems of law in African countries continue the colonial legacy of separation and the inequality that was bred thereby. With case studies that span the politico-legal areas of disability, education, and immigration rights, and exploring the unavoidable questions of culture as well as legal pluralism (from intranational to international), the papers help shed light on the ways in which rights are (mis)understood and (mis)applied on the continent.

Socioeconomic rights (SER) and sustainability - 1809

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): A

Description: Linkages between human rights and the environment are increasingly recognized and legitimized through law and policy, most notably in the SDGs, but also in other institutional, legal, and political realms. Under what conditions do human rights advocacy or struggle offer pathways to alter our destructive relationships with the natural world and each other? Can economic and social rights, in particular, challenge the power and systemic control over resources by the few that stymie change? What can we learn about alternatives by examining instances where socioeconomic rights and environmental justice intersect?

Description: This panel focuses on the contemporary potential and limits of law, social justice, and art. How can organizational diversity initiatives in US policing further entrench existing inequalities? What role do Dutch investigative police play in delegitimizing human rights generally and a suspect's right to silence in particular? How do government authorities' actions and legal process affect asylum seekers' institutional trust and trust in Sweden as a safe country? What role does trust play in organizing, scholarship, and work, and how can artists help academics generate trust? The Power of the Jury: Transforming Citizens into Jurors - 2695

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical C

Description: This session will discuss Nancy Marder's 'The Power of the Jury: Transforming Citizens into Jurors.' This book argues that each stage of the jury process transforms citizens into responsible jurors. Marder argues that jurors are made not found, and they are shaped by the jury process. This book analyzes each stage of this process, from summons to post-verdict interview, and shows how these stages equip jurors with experiences and knowledge that allow them to perform their new role ably. It adopts a holistic approach to the subject of jury reform and suggests reforms that will aid the transformation of citizens into jurors. By studying the jury from the perspective of jurors, it gives readers a better understanding of what takes place during jury trials and allows them to see juries, jurors, and the jury process in a new light.

To Hate or Not to Hate: Is This the Question? - 3250

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: How does law normalize settler colonialism and racial terror? In this roundtable we discuss how racial and colonial violence disappears into the category of hate crime or hate speech through a liberal framing of violence. When a white nationalist old male shooter killed ten Black people in Buffalo, the media sought out the director of an institute for the study of hate who denounced the hate demonstrated by the shooter. Universities have created institutes for the study of hate, organizations that typically describe hate as 'a distinctive feature of the human condition' and seek to explore how hate spreads (particularly online) and how individuals, conceptualized as extremists, come to hate others. In a stunning reversal, racialized peoples' own responses to racial violence and terror have been deemed hateful towards white people.

Too Much Law, Not Enough Society: How Multidisciplinary Approaches to Hateful Speech Enable Restorative Justice - 1827

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: In responding to incidents of hateful speech, administrators often default to a legalistic mindset, including in how they define violence and credibility. But a legalistic approach to interpersonal harm is only relevant in assessing conduct violations- not in caring for people harmed nor in educating others. In this roundtable session, we will discuss legal perspectives on transgressive speech as a starting point, and emphasize how, in the higher education context, counseling and pedagogy, among other practices, should be the leading edge of institutional response to harmful speech. We will discuss concepts including intent, impact, violence, restorative justice, and credibility. Participants leaving this roundtable will be able to demonstrate that a multidisciplinary approach to speech enables a more just and democratic institution.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 8, 9, 10

Description: This workshop invites participants to dream beyond our current social and legal structures to build anew. Historically, communities within Louisiana and Puerto Rico are neglected and criminalized by government. This is evident in responses to increasingly severe and frequent hurricanes like Katrina and Maria. Community requests for public healthcare, infrastructure support, and community investment are met with punitive and capitalist mechanisms which prioritize property and profit over people. In this session, legal, organizing, and policy experts will use a panel to spark a creative space where attendees will build a safe, resilient, thriving community. Considering legal and sociopolitical challenges and histories of colonialism and slavery, attendees will leave with new ideas for building their own resilient, thriving futures.

Law and Political Economy 101 - 3846

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo A

Description: This roundtable will introduce scholars to the LPE movement, which explicitly aims to analyze the role of law in shaping hierarchies of race and gender, market supremacy, technological development, climate crisis, and other central forces that define political economy and our world. Participants will discuss their respective entry points into the LPE movement, as well as key analytical 'moves' within LPE scholarship, and what it means to think, research, write, and teach within an LPE framework more broadly. Finally, the roundtable will engage with audience questions about the movement, the LPE Project, and JLPE.

Law, Emotion and (In)Equality II - 4346

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Ceiba

Description: Emotional, mental, physical, and spiritual wellbeing are distributed unequally across society. Wellbeing may be supported or undermined in emotion-laden contexts as diverse as when legal practitioners turn to psychotherapy, legislation promising better malpractice protection enables mental health clinicians to provide more effective therapy, compassion and Indigenous legal orders are used by lay community members to mend relationships, changes to tax law appear to empower new mothers in the workplace but leave systemic inequalities unaddressed, and medical imaging technology is appropriated in misinformation campaigns about abortion in political and legal arenas.

Law, Ethics, and Self - 4448

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 7

Description: The papers in this session ask critical questions about the self in relationship to emerging technologies, legal regimes, and contemporary social problems. Drawing on cases ranging from AI Ethics legislation in Europe, surveillance of Black Lives Matter protestors in the United States, and free speech in the Global South, these papers develop new theoretical approaches to understanding how technology reshapes understandings of law and society.

Open Hand, Closed Fist: Practices of Undocumented Organizing in a Hostile State - 1697

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: This is an author meets reader for Open Hand, Closed Fist: Practices of Undocumented Organizing in a Hostile State. How did a group that lacks legal status organize its members to become effective political activists? In the early 2000s, Arizona's campaign of 'attrition through enforcement' aimed to make life so miserable for undocumented immigrants that they would 'self-deport.' Undocumented activists resisted hostile legislation, registered thousands of new Latino voters, and joined a national movement to advance justice for immigrants. Drawing on five years of observation and interviews with activists in Phoenix, Arizona, Kathryn Abrams explains how the practices of storytelling, emotion cultures, and performative citizenship fueled this grassroots movement.

Penal Changes and Continuities in Latin America - 2960

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Flamboyán

Description: This session deals with the recent penal transformations produced in Latin America, predominantly marked by a strong increase in punitiveness, although with some exceptional national cases in which contrary tendencies are evident as in Chile. Through different case studies, it seeks to critically question the explanatory efforts that have been made so far to understand this penal landscape, including the problematization of this contemporary contrast.

Police Accountability – Towards International Standards: Trans-disciplinary Empirical and Theoretical Perspectives - 2753

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: In many countries, external police accountability bodies independent from the police have been established over the past decades. Thus far, these oversight bodies have proven to be very different with respect to their size, tasks, governance, powers and their relationships with citizens and local communities. The contributions to this session look at external independent police accountability from a comparative and multi-disciplinary perspective. The panel is related to the international research project Police Accountability – Towards International Standards (2021-2024) in which research teams from five countries (Canada, France, Germany, Japan and the UK) look at external police oversight from a comparative perspective and seek to contribute to the theoretical and empirical understanding of independent police complaints bodies (IPCBs).

Post-Racial Constitutionalism and the Roberts Court: Rhetorical Neutrality and the Perpetuation of Inequality - 3226

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: The session will explore the race jurisprudence of the Roberts Court focusing on how the Court advances ostensibly neutral propositions to advance subjugation and oppression. Neutrality functions to advance post-racial constitutionalism in a number of ways: (i) the Roberts Court employs neutral process rhetoric such as the Constitution protects equal opportunity (not equal results) to emphasize the insignificance of race in a process that is fair and neutral; (ii) this leads to a set of neutral process rationales to rationalize the limits of racial progress; and (iii) because the Court is skeptical of race, in any form, the results in its race cases are virtually predetermined. The Roberts Court plays a central discursive role in American society in promoting retrogression, retrenchment, and the maintenance of subordination.

Profiting from Ecocide in the Caribbean - 2062

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo B

Description: The Caribbean is at the center of the climate crisis and experiencing the dire consequences of a long history of colonial exploitation that is now being materialized in the form of ecological crises and multiple climate change related disasters. Nevertheless, scholarly debates on the role of law, colonialism, and on the political economy of the climate crisis in the Caribbean remain somewhat elusive and disconnected. This roundtable aims to bring together scholars working on the ecocidal consequences of different forms of predatory investment and capital flows in the region. This roundtable aims to promote a serious discussion about the immediate and dire environmental consequences of colonial and corporate profiteering in the Caribbean, and the social, political, and economic transformation is necessary to protect the region.

Race, Class and Gender in Labor and Employment - 4474

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo C

Description: This panel offers insights into labor rights and employment law through a law and political economy perspective, emphasizing the ways in which race, class and gender have shaped the landscape of labor and employment. Papers in this panel cover the current and historical status of the corporations that profited from peonage and convict leasing of African Americans after the Civil War, the current situation of White-Collar Labor Activism and the challenges it brings about on self-regulation theories and praxis, and the experience of rehab workers at Salvation Army's Rehabilitation Centers and the way in which American racial capitalism is justified and sustained. A feminist reading of Universal Basic Income is provided, discussing how it can improve the lives of vulnerable women and other subordinated groups.

Separate and Unequal in Indian Country - 2335

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 5

Description: This panel will explore the multiple levels upon which separate and unequal operate for Native people in the United States. Native Nations experience separate and unequal differently than other groups. Like territories, separate for Native Nations may refer to their claims for recognition of their status as distinct sovereigns colonized by the United States. Similarly, equality may refer to equal treatment as a government rather than equality among individuals. On an individual level, political equality may function differently for tribal citizens due to their distinct political relationships with their Native Nations and the U.S. government. Several of these issues have arisen in recent Indian law cases heard by the Supreme Court. The panelists will critically discuss the various meanings of separate and unequal in federal Indian law.

Sex Is as Sex Does: Governing Transgender Identity - 1534

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo D

Description: In Sex Is as Sex Does: Governing Transgender Identity, Paisley Currah looks at state decisions on sex reclassification. While trans advocates have often made claims about what sex and gender really are, policymakers, he found, cared more about what sex does for particular state projects. One allows trans people to change their sex classification on their identity documents while another insists that those very same people hew to a sex fixed at birth. (Currah uses 'sex' to refer to decisions about M, F, or X that are backed by the force of law.) The reason for this inconsistency is that sex classifications advance different state purposes. The 'sex is as sex does' framework (situating sex as a technology of government) has now largely been displaced by the push-pull of forces organized around the concept of transgender.

Technology and Judges: Separate approaches to improve Justice, or unequal benefits? - 4415

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): B

Description: If barriers to justice include delays, cost, and judicial bias, various technologies promise to minimise these barriers and speed access to justice. Is the promise being kept? Across the globe there have been innovations in judicial technologies. This panel considers reports of current practice from jurisdictions such as Brazil and Portugal, where the delicate judicial task of case management is shifting to the digital realm. Technology can impact the very core of the judicial role, by influencing human decision-making. This panel will explore how algorithms can help to model judicial decision-making, how neurotech can mitigate judicial error and the prospect of the 'enhanced' judge. What are the political and practical implications? And how might the public respond?

The Law in Action: Tackling Social Problems on the Frontlines of Work - 1238

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical B

Description: Responsibility for addressing social problems falls to frontline workers who interact with citizens/clients and exercise discretion over institutional resources and punishments. The ways in which workers sort, label, and treat citizens/clients have serious long-term consequences. This panel examines how cultural, institutional, and organizational factors shape frontline work by illuminating the challenges faced by workers in healthcare, education, child welfare, law, and emergency services. Panelists reveal how workers collaborate across field boundaries, how workers adopt norms and values of other fields, and how workers delegate tasks in the context of broader structural constraints. Their research also explains the broader historical forces that give power to frontline decision-making and that shape the lives of citizen/clients.

Balzac v. People of Porto Rico and the Invisible Precedent: Contemporary Effects of the Doctrine of Separate and Unequal - 4066

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo A

Description: In Balzac v. People of Porto Rico (1922) the Supreme Court applied the Insular Cases doctrine, also known as the doctrine of territorial incorporation to Puerto Rico, now a territorial possession primarily inhabited by U.S. citizens. In recent years, the Supreme Court, and other the federal branches, began applying the principles of this doctrine without citing the latter precedents, precedents that were premised on racist and discriminatory language. The most recent example of such a tendency is the 2022 Vaello Madero US Supreme Court decision in which residents of Puerto Rico are denied parity in certain federal programs like the SSI. This roundtable examines contemporary ways in which the invisible precedent continues to inform political, sociolegal and economic debates in Puerto Rico.

Discounting Life: Necropolitical Law, Culture, and the Long War on Terror, Author Meets Reader - 2621

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: Discounting Life shows how and why the war on terror has become permanent, de-democratizing, and planetary. Demystifying law and showing how media conditions us to be fearful and unquestioning, this book re-values life and re-claim law's ideals and protections. This session engages the book's argument that images, narrative, and affect do the work of law; authorizing and legitimizing the discounting of some lives so that others – implicitly, American nationals – may live. Adopting an interdisciplinary approach to excavate the workings of necropolitical law and interrogating the U.S. state's justifications for the counterterror project, this book's temporal arc, the long War on Terror, illuminates the profound continuities and many guises for racialized, imperial violence informing the contemporary discounting of life.

Effects of Dependence and Subordination in Puerto Rico: Alternatives to Economic Stagnation and Precarious Democracy - 4108

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 8, 9, 10

Description: Puerto Rico has been a territory of the United States since 1899 after the Spanish American War of 1898, subject to political subordination and economic dependence. After World War II, despite a constitution authorized by Congress and post war economic boom, over the past fifty years the situation turned into economic stagnation and recently a prolonged depression. This has resulted in deep social crisis and precarious democracy. A fiscal crisis resulting from the public debt has led to the greatest bankruptcy in the history of the United States, increasing poverty, massive migration and loss of population, inadequate health services, deterioration of education, corruption, inadequate response to emergencies (hurricanes, earthquakes, pandemic) and loss of confidence of the people in its government.

Feminist Judgments: Immigration Law Opinions Rewritten - 1324

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: Participants are contributors to FEMINIST JUDGMENTS: IMMIGRATION LAW OPINIONS REWRITTEN (forthcoming Cambridge University Press, 2023). Participants will discuss how a feminist version of immigration law fosters a country where diverse newcomers flourish with dignity. They will discuss the immigration law system's rampant discrimination and intentional subordination of noncitizens. By reimagining Supreme Court opinions, contributors highlight how feminist reasoning values the perspectives of outsiders, exposes the deep-rooted bias in the legal opinions of courts, and illuminates the effects of ostensibly neutral policies that create and maintain oppression and hierarchy. Their approach, known collectively as 'critical immigration legal theory' prioritizes critical feminist and race concerns in the redesign of immigration law.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): D

Description: This panel critically examines the ways in which legal systems regulate, or fail to regulate, humans qua producers of bodily secretions and reproductive materials, on the one hand, and consumers of foods, on the other hand. In some contexts, regulation is welcome, or even essential, for individuals to have access to safe and appropriate foods, medical care, and other forms of support, while in others, legal interventions risk stripping them of their autonomy, creating regulatory and other barriers to access, self-expression, and safety. Panelists will contribute to deepening our understanding of the legal status of the human body by uncovering the various commitments animating regulatory efforts or their absence and analyzing their distributive consequences, especially in terms of race and gender.

Description: Since the last major U.S. laws advancing workplace organizing in 1935, and antidiscrimination law in 1965, public-private tensions have reemerged, insisting we reinterpret the meaning of work and governing laws. Examining these trends through the lenses of anthropology, law and economy, local regulation, and critical theories, we address socio-legal tensions in work law: legislative bans on faculty tenure as undermining equitable institutions; the emergence of 'managerial entrenchment' to nullify or coopt local labor innovations; a CRT and LPE critique of work law as a site of transhistorical economic change and racial solidarity; and a study of the 'alt labor' movements' elevation of values in the discourse surrounding moral economies.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal C

Description: While the international crime of 'sexual violence' is today defined in treaties, criminal codes, and statutes using neutral language, in practice the application of the law is anything but neutral. This panel interrogates how different constructions of sexual victimhood are produced and reinforced in international law and post-conflict settings. On one level, this panel questions the politics of who gets to be counted as a victim of sexual violence, examining how a person's identity (along lines of gender, race, age, etc.) may determine whether their experiences remain legible to international lawyers. Similarly, this panel questions what it means to be counted as a victim of sexual violence and whether this legibility is always an advantageous result for survivors of sexual crimes.

Theorising From the Outside In: Doing Law and Society in Africa - 4096

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): A

Description: IRC 55's panel explores the implications of theorising law & society in Africa from the inside out. It examines what the implications of an uncritical reception of law & society scholarship deriving from an outside point of view have been (and continue to be) for how we theorise the nature & content of (modern) law's interactions & instantiation in African society. On another level, the panel examines the implications for African scholars who - whilst active participants in law and society scholarship - are nonetheless positioned largely as outsiders not only to dominant doctrinal law traditions in their home institutions, but also to the prevailing intellectual/theoretical architecture of the global law & society movement & to research-enabling funding institutions.

Unequal Access to Protection at the European Union's Eastern Border - 2958

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: This panel focuses on differential treatment of persons seeking protection at the Eastern border of the European Union. Using the theme of 'separate but unequal' as a lens we analyze the legal normalization of unequal access to asylum in the EU. Approaching the EU's refugee management as embedded in modernity/coloniality we argue after Thomas Spijkerboer (2018) that the contemporary migration management laws and policies, based on the non-entrée approach, create two parallel legal systems that apply to people depending on their citizenship, legal status, race, or gender. Whereas one group's access to protection is enhanced the other group is securitised and excluded. As illustration we use the most recent developments concerning the access to asylum at the European Union's Eastern border in Finland, Lithuania, and Poland.

Welcome to Tropi(fis)cal Paradise: Critical Perspectives of the Puerto Rican Visitor Economy - 4561

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 3

Description: The Caribbean is usually portrayed as a laid-back tropical paradise featuring empty beaches, vibrant carnivals, rum and cigar-infused pirate adventures, and a break from the monotony of middle-class life. Since the arrival of Europeans in 1492, the visitor economy has shaped the region's history and natural landscape. Puerto Rico, the site of this year's Law and Society Conference, is no exception, as it continues to wrestle with issues of sovereignty, tax incentives for the rich, and the displacement of numerous communities. Join us for this interdisciplinary special panel alongside a local historian, an economist, an art curator, and a community organizer to examine Puerto Rico's complex relationship with the political economy of the visitor. The panel will reveal the hidden costs of Puerto Rico's hospitality and shed light on the complexities of tropi-(fis)-cal paradises in the Caribbean.

Access to Civil Justice III: Studying the civil justice ecosystem - 3828

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal F

Description: This panel approaches the study of civil justice problems, and interventions to address them, from a person-centered, social ecosystems perspective. This roundtable will feature the ongoing research projects of a multi-disciplinary group of scholars investigating civil justice problems and designing and testing interventions across different sites, highlighting the value of adopting as the unit of analysis individuals who experience justice problems in the context of larger social challenges. Goals of this session include learning from one another and discussing strategies to increase the visibility of research on the civil justice ecosystem. In particular, participants will discuss previous work on the session's topics and ideas for future research avenues – among other themes.

Carceral Transparency: Cross-National Debates on Prison Governance - 3217

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Flamboyán

Description: Carceral institutions feature particularly poor transparency standards. This significant shortcoming affects both prisons and other custodial institutions such as immigration detention facilities. These substandard transparency arrangements have an impact on carceral conditions and quality of life behind bars and prevent non-state actors from developing any meaningful model of prison oversight. This panel brings together scholars conducting research on carceral transparency and prison governance in various global regions to explore innovative ways to challenge the opacity regime currently characterising the carceral state.

Colonial Bureaucracy and Contemporary Citizenship: Legacies of Race and Emergency in the Former British Empire (Israel/Palestine, India & Cyprus) @ Cambridge University Press 2022 - 2969

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 6

Description: How do colonial bureaucratic practices to manage and subdue subject populations, continue to shape our lives today? This book panel examines how the legacies of colonial bureaucracy continue to shape political life after empire. Focusing on the former British colonies of India, Cyprus, and Israel/Palestine, all shaped by partition plans, the book explores how post-colonial states use their inherited administrative legacies to classify and distinguish between loyal and suspicious subjects and manage the movement of populations, thus shaping the practical meaning of citizenship and belonging within their new boundaries. The book offers new knowledge to overturn conventional understandings of bureaucracy, demonstrating that routine bureaucratic practices and persistent colonial logics continue to shape unequal political status to this day

Data Driven: Truckers, Technology, and the New Workplace Surveillance - 4139

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 7

Description: Data Driven examines how digital surveillance is upending the life and work of long-haul truckers, raising crucial questions about the role of data collection in broader systems of social control. Federal regulations now require truckers to buy and install digital monitors that capture data about their locations and behaviors. Levy reveals how these invasive technologies are reconfiguring industry relationships and providing new tools for managerial and legal control-and how truckers are challenging and resisting them. Data Driven contributes to an emerging conversation about how technology affects our work, institutions, and personal lives, and helps to guide our thinking about how to protect public interests and safeguard human dignity in the digital age.

Focusing on Families: Centering Lived Experience in Teaching Family Policing - 1735

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo C

Description: A groundswell of organizing by individuals with lived experience in the family policing ('child protection') system, increased advocacy from the family defense bar, and the confluence of the Black Lives Matter movement and Black feminist activism have fueled both vision and action toward child welfare abolition. This movement has also inspired an increasingly robust body of critical and forward-thinking scholarship. This roundtable will focus on the implications of family policing abolition for law school teaching and the imperative to center individuals with lived experience in this work. The discussion will be led by individuals with lived experience who are powerfully engaged in 'child welfare' abolition advocacy, and law professors engaged in training the next generation of lawyers who will work both within and against the system.

Lay Perceptions of Legal Judgments - 4284

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): B

Description: This panel uses empirical methods to explore how members of the public consider legal processes. We explore lay perceptions of confidential settlements and NDAs, asking what might determine people's decisions to accept or reject a settlement offer, and how they balance competing goals of confidentiality and publicity. We then extend this to perceptions of private settlement more broadly, and in particular measure public opinions about publicity and attribution of responsibility in cases that settle. Finally, we explore how the specific language that legal actors use can influence lay perceptions, testing how dehumanizing language in closing statements affects mock jurors' emotional responses to and perceptions of capital defendants. Implications for perceptions of fairness and legitimacy of the legal system are discussed.

Personal and professional identities in and out of law school - 4408

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: Whereas law students come to law school as individuals with diverse identities, needs and ambitions, and lawyers in society fulfil diverse roles, law school is often a painful process of standardization. The papers in this session challenge us to consider how law schools can prove harmful and reinforce hierarchies of identity and performance. They also force us to rethink how law school socialization impacts professional identity formation and how to cultivate both students' diverse personal identities and lawyers' diverse professional identities. Finally, they show the variety of public roles that lawyers take on in society and question how well law schools prepare future lawyers to take on such roles and adequately serve the public good, as well as maintain their own values and wellbeing.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar A

Description: Providers of commercial sexual services face social stigma, limited protections from the law, and social stratification. The studies on this panel explore how providers of sexual services grapple with socio-legal exclusion, criminalization and monitoring by law enforcement systems, denial of access to financial institutions and instruments, censorship and exclusion from social media, and even exclusion by researchers themselves. These studies also examine how the experiences and perspectives of sex workers can improve the quality and ethics of research and highlight the harms of sociolegal exclusion, criminalization, and an absence of rights to protection against discrimination based on one's sexual behavior or occupation. The role of technology (AI, social media, online banking) in sexual economies is also a common theme of these papers.

Rethinking Care and Social Reproduction: Perspectives from the Global South - 3121

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Description: The pandemic has revealed the crucial role that care work and social reproduction, typically performed by women, play in the sustenance of human life and economy activity around the world. Still care work is ridden with structural inequalities as Jain and Kintominas show in relation to India's health care workers and migrants au pair carers in Australia, respectively. Even as international organisations place care at the heart of a post pandemic economic recovery, Jaramillo critically assesses the care turn in Latin America revealing it to be the domain of policy consultants with little transformative impact. Mandal and Kotiswaran meanwhile assess the state's duties to meet the social reproduction needs of its citizens through as assessment of gendered constitutionalism and a feminist theory of the postcolonial welfare state.

Roundtable: Carceral Logics in Civil Legal Systems - 3487

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo D

Description: Despite the growing and robust discourse identifying the racism within the massive criminal legal system, less has been said about the carceral logics embedded within so-called civil legal systems. Yet, the lives of marginalized communities are thoroughly impacted by it—they are surveilled, marked, and punished by state and private actors as they navigate family courts, benefits offices, medical facilities, and immigration proceedings. These different systems and institutions interact in ways that enlarge their impacts on the most marginalized communities. This roundtable will explore how the historic roots in white supremacy and settler colonialism characterizing the criminal legal system also underlie family law, immigration law, and poverty law, as does the contemporary social control and legitimization of racialized class hierarchies.

The Anti-WOKE global right movement and future of restorative justice - 4210

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal G

Description: Global right political retrenchment has increasingly resulted in highly restrictive legislation and policy intended to diminish the voices of structurally marginalized populations.

Yet simultaneously, policymakers, non-governmental actors, and civil society continue to embrace restorative justice (RJ) which sharply contrasts with global right exclusionary ideologies. By constructing new paradigms of rights and norms, challenging persistent exclusion and marginalization, and reevaluating justice processes and outcomes, RJ redefines both the concept and experience of justice. Drawing on diverse international perspectives, this roundtable explores two critical questions: 1) Does RJ have a future inside the expansion of the global right? 2) How must restorative socio-legal reforms be adapted for implementation under such conditions?

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 3

Description: In this session, the book 'Understanding Due Process in Non-Criminal Matters. How to Harmonize Procedural Guarantees with the Right to Access to Justice' will be analyzed by leading scholars on sociolegal studies, constitutional law, and access to justice. The book offers a due process theory for civil matters, assessing the different roles that this basic international human right plays in comparison with criminal justice. It answers the question of what the basic requirements are concerning the right to a fair trial on civil matters, i.e., what we can and cannot sacrifice when designing a civil procedure that correctly distributes the risk of moral harm while remaining accessible to people with complex and simple legal needs, in order to reconcile the requirements of procedural fairness with social demands for justice.

Women in Conflict: Separate, Yet Unequal - 3482

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: Decades ago, the recognition of women's roles and practices in conflict situations was not as prominent in law, the society and even in scholarship. Post the various wars and conflict situations, several scholarships have emerged; the law has undergone some changes, and the society has acknowledged some realities while creating a separate category of and for women. The panel will explore questions of how the law has enacted a separate and unequal category of women despite the posturing that 'everyone is equal before the law'. Second, the panel will highlight how societies collude with the law both to create separate categories of and for women, deepen this chasm of 'unequalness' and how faced with these two powerful structures, some women have risen above it.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar B

Description: This panel focuses on a ground-breaking new book by Laura Edwards, Only the Clothes on Her Back: Clothing and the Hidden History of Power in the Nineteenth-Century United States, which reframes the legal history of this period by focusing on property that other historians generally ignore: dresses, bedlinens, waistcoats, pantaloons, shoes, and kerchiefs. For those on society's margins, textiles functioned as dollars and cents-literally. People were paid in textiles; used textiles to purchase all kinds of goods; and leveraged their value by trading, pawning, or lending them. As evidenced in thousands of cases, the special property in textiles depended on law, which protected the cultural connections between individuals and their clothing, turning them into a secure form of property that could be used as currency, credit, and capital.

China and the Future of the International Legal Order - 3418

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: How will China impact the international legal order? The question has attracted increasing attention of scholars and policymakers around the world. As Xi has further consolidated his rule over China and the US-China confrontation continues to escalate, it is a critical time to address the question, taking into consideration the significant changes in China's domestic politics as well as its geopolitical environment. Prior research has assumed that China would continue to grow in a world that could avoid another Cold War or military conflicts involving major powers. The validity of that assumption is now questionable. This panel explores what current developments suggest for both conceptual theory and empirical study of China's impacts on the international legal order.

Climate Justice 2 - 4378

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical A

Description: The Law and Climate Change CRN is organizing a set of five panels. The sessions aim to discuss several dimensions of the climate crisis. This year, we will have three panels dedicated to climate justice and two sessions focused on climate regulation. We will also combine studies centered on the Global North and Global South that explore these issues from a comparative perspective. The authors come from multiple disciplines, which will help talk about climate-related problems and the roles of legal actors, institutions, and organizations in addressing these issues from an interdisciplinary background. This is the second panel of this year's meeting.

Comparative and Transnational Perspectives on Legal History - 4356

Date and Time:

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo C

Description: History scholarship is often focused on a single country and raises matters of debate in that country's historiography. This approach is inadequate to understanding how people and law travel across borders, and to understanding processes that span national borders, such as wars and the world economy. Each of the papers on this panel seeks to think outside of a single national focus. Two examine the legal history of one individual country, but they do so in search of generalizations that apply more broadly and each informed by the international situation of war and empire. The other three papers all examine relationships among different countries or compare different countries to one another. As a whole the panel demonstrates the benefits of thinking outside of national frames of reference via comparative and transnational research.

Compliance & Enforcement - 4365

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: How and why do individuals and corporations vary in their compliance to regulations? In turn, how to regulators vary in the stringency of their enforcement and how can that variation lead to inequitable impacts for marginalized citizens? Can reliance on agreed upon performance standards ensure more equitable and effective regulation? Papers on this panel examine these questions in the areas of environmental, water, and scientific research laboratories.

Contemporary Labor Law Theory and Policy - 4362

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 3

Description: This panel discusses contemporary legal theory and policy related to labor and employment law. Sergio Gamonal presents the work of representatives of utopian socialism and the relevance of their theories in the context of globalization and labor precariousness. Charlotte Garden introduces her policy paper on self-enforcement of labor relations and its limits. Hiba Hafiz provides policy recommendations to address the unique labor market characteristics of rural and distressed labor markets and to restructure collective bargaining. Carina Gallo and Elizabeth Anne Brown compare the different approaches of prison work and rehabilitation in the US and Sweden.

Corporations and the Social Good - 4287

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal E

Description: This panel interrogates the 'S' of ESG. There is a growing consensus among activists that corporations should serve some social good beyond profit. That social good might include various objectives, including racial equity, consumer empowerment, and employee welfare. Using a diverse range of methodologies—empirical, theoretical, and doctrinal—the panelists will discuss how different policies could best steer corporations in the right direction.

Creative Approaches to Criminal-Legal-Medical Partnerships - 2916

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical C

Description: This roundtable would bring together attorneys, health providers, and other advocates for a conversation on ways the criminal legal/immigration detention reform communities and community health practitioners can collaborate for improved outcomes. This will include a discussion on advocacy mechanisms, including compassionate release projects, legislative testimony, clemency applications, hospital reform and guidance, and impact litigation. This is important because many attorneys and advocates around the country are having difficulty finding medical experts and there is an urgent need to engage, recruit, and train the next generation of medical experts for criminal and civil rights advocacy. The roundtable will brainstorm additional forms of partnerships and ways to formalize informal channels utilized during the Covid crisis.

Criminal Justice and Technology: Law and It's Limitations - 4450

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 7

Description: Technology has dramatically shifted the ways that people commit crimes and undertake criminalized activities. However, the law has struggled to keep up, failing to reflect the way that technology has been used to harm victims and advertise illegal or quasi-legal activities. This panel presents three papers exploring how technology has changed criminal and criminalized activities in a range of contexts, and address how the law has and has not kept pace.

Decolonizing Legal Authoritarianism (Session I) - 3385

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: The continuation of colonial-era legal systems across the Global South has created obstacles to democratic and economic development, leading to much tension and frustration. Neo-colonial pressures-i.e. powerful Northern political influence, global economic exploitation, environmental destruction, and financial systems that rely on offshore tax havens-have entrenched an inequality that breeds sharp cultural, economic, and political fault lines and social cleavages. Over the last decade we have seen the emergence of new political forces that prey on this inequality, exploit deep political and social resentments, and replace traditional elites with charismatic, populist, or authoritarian leaders. This panel seeks to decolonize the phenomenon by investigating the processes that lead to the emergence of diverse forms of authoritarianism.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Ceiba

Description: Law and Emotions scholarship has focused largely on a subset of emotions such as remorse, shame, and disgust. This panel seeks papers that diverge from that model. How do emotions such as alienation, sentimentality (rather than empathy), ambivalence, rage, indifference, irritation, paranoia, shock, boredom, grief, and mixed emotions impact legal practice, judicial decisions, and our own research practices and norms.

Inequality and Courts - 4497

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): E

Description: It is not controversial to assert that the 'haves' do better than the 'have nots' in litigious processes. Exactly what this means for courts as institutions is a different matter. This panel puts together papers that explore related subjects. One paper revisits Clair's (2020) thesis asserting, inter alia, that parties who personally intervene in trials in their own behalf receive tougher penalties than not. Its findings agree with this hypothesis, but also finds that 'pressing matters' (such as drug addiction) do not diminish probabilities of the party intervening in trial. A second paper explores the possible trade off between egalitarian challenges against certain judicial proceedings, and judicial accuracy in implementing the law. A third paper evaluates the use of judicial proceedings during Covid19 in several countries.

Law, Press Freedom, and Democracy - 1898

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): C

Description: The press is under siege. Cycles of layoffs have stripped expertise from newsrooms, defamation lawsuits are increasing, public distrust is at record levels, and some U.S. Supreme Court Justices have begun questioning foundational First Amendment principles safeguarding the press function. Our panel participants are researching various legal protections for mass media's role in providing the stock of factual information necessary to democracy. Topics include: (1) The Violence of Free Speech and Press Metaphors (Erin C. Carroll); (2) Defamation, Disinformation, and the Press Function (RonNell Andersen Jones); (3) Press Protection Beyond the Constitution? (Lili Levi); (4) The Tragedy of Bot-Written News Stories and the Future of Defamation (Amy Gajda); (5) The Press Function in an Era of First Amendment Disequilibrium (Lyrisa Lidsky).

Law's Politics: The politics of (de)legitimizing knowledge claims in legal processes - 2164

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: The panel examines how legal actors and advocates manage the law-politics boundary, as well as how they help produce that very distinction by translating knowledge from academic research and advocacy work into legal evidence. Boundaries between law and politics are the result of power relations and reflect visions of the relationship between law and society. In light of the law's potential to constrain, as well as enable state violence, the papers inquire into the ethical and political dimensions of why and how knowledge is mobilized in legal processes. Case studies include expertise in migration cases, the use of scientific evidence in environmental claims, and the ways that human rights and administrative law judgments draw distinctions between legitimate legal intervention and the 'politicization' of law.

Multi-Sited Dynamics of Autocratization and Resistance - 3999

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): B

Description: It is a disturbing paradox that the deterioration of democracy and the rule of law frequently happens within the law and through law, often without even passing new legislation, by simply altering the meaning or application of extant legal provisions. This panel explores how the weaponization of the law by autocrats and illiberal forces play out across different spheres—including electoral politics, the media and freedom of speech, sexual and reproductive rights, environmental protection—and how different areas are intertwined, domestically and internationally. We also explore the role of rights, law, and courts in the resistance against the various forms of autocratic lawfare. This panel is part of a cross-regional collaborative project aimed at rethinking teaching and research on autocratization dynamics, coordinated by LawTransform.

Prefigurative Legality - 1795

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar A

Description: Since the early 2000s, many of the left groups that spurred the alt-globalization movement have embraced directly democratic organizing and the ongoing creation of ethical relationships and subjectivities far more than they have pursued projects to reform legal and political institutions. These practices are often described as prefigurative because people are working to build alternative possible futures in the here-and-now outside of dominant statist and capitalist rationalities. In this roundtable, we ask if prefiguration can also involve imagining legal forms anew. Examples for discussion include activist lawyering in revolutionary contexts, clinic lawyering in solidarity with social movements, people's tribunals responding to climate change, and feminist judgement projects.

Date and Time: Friday, June 2nd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal G

Description: Though we rarely see them at work, building inspectors have the power to significantly shape our lives through their discretionary decisions. The building inspectors of Chicago are at the heart of sociologist Robin Bartram's analysis of how individuals impact-or attempt to impact-housing inequality. In Stacked Decks, she reveals surprising patterns in the judgment calls inspectors make when deciding whom to cite for building code violations. These predominantly white, male inspectors largely recognize that they work within an unequal housing landscape that systematically disadvantages poor people and people of color through redlining, property taxes, and city spending that favor wealthy neighborhoods.

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: The study of violent conflict and its relationship with the problems of agrarian inequality requires a deep understanding of the livelihoods of peasant and racialized populations, especially those most affected by the war, and the institutional responses aimed at guaranteeing their social, political and economic inclusion. Overcoming the conditions that intensify the vulnerability of these populations entails, among others, administrative decisions, such as the collection of reliable information to guide state intervention, and the establishment of institutions of justice that allow them to channel their claims, especially when the state fails to fulfill its constitutional duties. Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 5

Description: The panel provides insights into the need for rethinking the traditional approaches to economic development and trade, and the role of law in shaping and regulating these processes. The papers discuss the paradox of global economic production and its impact on local communities, and the need for new approaches that prioritize sustainability, resilience, and collective entities governed through contract. The panel also delves into the political economy of global value chains, examining the pricing techniques used in these chains and their impact on human rights. It also discusses the effects of transnational institutions in domestic policymaking and regulation, based on a case study of the Chilean banking system. Finally, the panel also explores the concept of transformative law, emphasizing the strategic position of law in shaping institutions such as competition, contract, corporation, and property.

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo B

Description: What do we learn from LPE scholarship about the question of 'what law is,' how legal change happens, and to think about the possibilities of transformative institutional change? This roundtable is premised on the idea that we must shift away from traditional top-down, court-centered, models for understanding law and legal institutions, as well as the marginalization of questions of social and economic hierarchy and distribution. It gathers together scholars who study social movements; changing technological legal infrastructures of property, currency, and labor management as key to developing practices of wealth accumulation in a capitalist system; and who recognize race as a longstanding and persistent blindspot in the study of law and reframe histories and contemporary accounts of legal institutional development accordingly.

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: The continuation of colonial-era legal systems across the Global South has created obstacles to democratic and economic development, leading to much tension and frustration. Neo-colonial pressures-i.e. powerful Northern political influence, global economic exploitation, environmental destruction, and financial systems that rely on offshore tax havens-have entrenched an inequality that breeds sharp cultural, economic, and political fault lines and social cleavages. Over the last decade we have seen the emergence of new political forces that prey on this inequality, exploit deep political and social resentments, and replace traditional elites with charismatic, populist, or authoritarian leaders. This panel seeks to decolonize the phenomenon by investigating the processes that lead to the emergence of diverse forms of authoritarianism.

Fifty Years of Mass Incarceration: Plus C'est La Même Chose? - 1847

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): D

Description: A complete understanding of the five-decade-long era of mass incarceration requires a broader historical lens as well as a closer look at certain people and places. Panelists will examine the changing goals of American imprisonment since the first prison and more recent changes in the spatial context of mass incarceration. Through both empirical research and personal narratives, they will also relate the growth of life-without-parole-or death-in-prison-sentences to mass incarceration and to evidence on brain development for youth and emerging adults. (Note: Marianne Fisher-Giorlando will be reading remarks prepared by John Corley, Associate Editor of The Angolite.)

Forensic Assessment and Predicting Risk of Violence - 4280

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: Forensic psychological assessments and evaluations of dangerousness have the potential to meaningfully impact legal consequences. In this panel we review the state of research on forensic mental health assessment and consider differences in existing practices. We propose criteria for considering the credibility of forensic assessments and highlight key elements of best practices. We further focus particularly on risk assessment and predicting future dangerousness, looking at real world data connecting parental incarceration to likelihood of committing future violence. Finally, we consider how legal and psychological definitions of dangerousness might diverge and discuss the potential impacts of that discrepancy.

Gentrification and Forced Displacement: The Colonial Legacy of Puerto Rico's Housing Crisis - 3913

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): B

Description: In a recent song/documentary called El Apagón, Puerto Rican hip hop artist Bad Bunny forced his fans to confront a Puerto Rican story too many never see: the so-called nation-rebuilding efforts post-Maria/post-Fiona that seize upon natural disasters and colonial legacies to transfer coveted property to outside investors whose profit-motive defile the collective good. Our panel will discuss the impact of these measures on the housing crisis in Puerto Rico, including their forced displacement out of Puerto Rico, by contextualizing them as part of Puerto Rico's legacy of colonialism.

Legal Mobilization's Responses Elite Capture, the Mobilization Dilemma and Human Regard: Reports from the Ground - 2575

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: Táíwò (2022) identifies the process by which radical movements' liberatory potential is depleted by elites who see, and hence serve, their own narrow idiosyncratic interests. Moody-Adams (2022) asks movements to experiment in moral philosophy through humane regard. NeJaime (2014) outlines a Legal Mobilization Dilemma in which, 'allows individuals to speak on behalf of a group and bind other group members.' While scholars and activists have critiqued the capture of movements by elite lawyers, less attention is paid to elite's interests within movements and who, if anyone, can represent the authentic interests of a movement or a community. This roundtable hopes to provoke conversation about how elite capture and humane regard can be accounted for, dampened or leveraged by legal mobilization actors on the ground and in the moment.

Methodological Approaches to Criminal Justice Bureaucracies in Latin America I - 2548

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo C

Description: How to methodologically approach bureaucracies involved in the criminal justice system in Latin America? From police forces to criminal courts, prosecutorial authorities, and the military, in this session we reflect on the possibilities and limitations of carrying out empirical research on different institutions, in various observation sites, and through several research techniques. The individual papers in this session focus on diverse countries, approach the question of methodology from contrasting perspectives, and invite us to shift scales of analysis; however, they are all confronted with the same question of how to grasp the complexities of criminal justice in the region. The session reflects on the common challenges faced by researchers conducting socio-legal studies on criminal justice bureaucracies in Latin America.

Nature Conservation and Colonialism: Studies of Ecological Warfare - 3964

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: Nature conservation is often perceived as existing outside the domain of politics. This panel invites a critical contemplation of that assumption. We will examine how conservation, and the protection of certain lands and species in particular, is deployed as a potent colonial tool that furthers the dispossession and elimination of local and Indigenous communities. That the colonial administration of nature is configured through scientific expertise and practices illuminates how deeply entrenched the colonial mindset has become in ecological ways of thinking. Among other explorations at the nexus of nature and colonialism, we will also explore the underlying interconnections between acts of violence toward humans, nonhumans, and the earth. Self-managed Abortion I: Experience and Practice - 2375

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: Since the COVID-19 pandemic, self-managed abortion (SMA) has become more prevalent among pregnant people and more visible in the media and policy discussions. Recent progressive legal reforms and constitutional rulings in Latin America have also contributed to highlighting the vital role that local SMA movements and organizations have played in both guaranteeing access under restrictive laws but also in exposing their injustice and the need for change. Finally, the demise of Roe v. Wade in the USA has forced conversations and practices of abortion to shift from highly medicalized models in clinics to more autonomous models at home, with pills. This session examines experiences and practices of SMA across different geographies to interrogate how they unleash novel understandings about abortion laws, politics and policies.

The Racial Boundaries of Legal Order: Slavery, Freedom, and Power in the Atlantic Americas - 1944

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal C

Description: Legal institutions and legal practitioners deployed racial categories throughout the Caribbean, North America, South America, and Europe to control labor, capital, violence, and trade. This panel uses historical examples to describe the development of racial ideologies that structured the enforcement of spiritual pawning, criminal law, transnational commerce, national citizenship, and human agency. During the long nineteenth century, diverse legal actors used systems of racial boundaries, geographic borders, and temporal periodizations to develop, sustain, and resist various forms of racial oppression. To understand these historical interactions of law, space, and racial hierarchy will necessarily open a new perspective about racial geographies that continue to structure and inform modern legal orders today.

The Shame of Colonies - 1672

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 8-9:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Ceiba

Description: As a matter of historic and physical fact, the US territories (and their colonial status) have long been hidden from view. This has also been true in law, but less so in recent years. Just this past term, Justices Gorsuch and Sotomayor castigated the Court for its continued refusal to overrule the shameful Insular Cases. These cases, decided over a century ago, continue to provide the legal justification for the existing colonial status of the territories. Their effects on territorial laws, and on the psychology of territorial residents, are severe. Most troubling, the Court's recent actions and inactions amount to a redux of the Insular Cases. As importantly, the Court has relied on the Territorial Clause to justify recent decisions, thus signaling the perdurance of second-class citizenship in the territories.

Aging and Dying Incarcerated - 1583

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical C

Description: In recent decades, the number of people aged fifty-five or older in United States prisons has grown dramatically, and so has the number of people who are older dying in US prisons each year. In this context, the needs and concerns of older incarcerated persons and the prison's capacity to provide geriatric and palliative care become critical points of research. This panel draws on current research into end of life and end of life care in US penal institutions and places it in a broader conversation about the deeper implications of what it means for increasingly large numbers of community members to die while unfree in prison. Framing this in the historical context of American slavery and penal servitude, the discussion will focus on grief, dignity, and working towards abolitionist reforms for older adults.

Description: Since 2006, more than 85,000 people have disappeared in Mexico. These disappearances remain largely unsolved: disappeared people are rarely found, and the Mexican state almost never investigates or prosecutes those responsible. Despite this, people not only continue to report disappearances, but many devote their lives to answering the question, 'where are they?' Given the risks and institutional barriers, why and how do people mobilize for justice in states with rampant impunity and weak rule of law?

Challenges for the Decolonization of the State in Latin America from the perspective of the Egalitarian Legal Pluralism - 3963

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: The aim of this panel is to reflect about some challenges for the deconstruction of unequal power relationships that characterized the Latin American States and place indigenous and Afrodescendant peoples within a subordinated position. That subordinated position is the consequence of old and new forms of invasion that indigenous peoples have suffered and is the core of colonialism. As part of a decolonial agenda, indigenous and Afrodescendant peoples have fought for the ratification of international treaties, as well as for constitutional processes that recognize their collective rights as peoples, such as the right to self-determination, territories, cultural identity, participation and their own juridical systems, including their own authorities, norms and jurisdictional functions, based on the equal dignity of peoples.

Constitutionalism in Africa - 3592

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Flamboyán

Description: It is arguable that the colonial state in Africa was never dismantled at independence; it proceeded (albeit with marginally symbolic changes). In other words, there was exchange – and not change. Hence, it has remained difficult to dismantle the legacies of colonialism to pursue the emancipatory goals envisioned by independent movements. This roundtable will continue the conversation that started at the LSA 2021 Future of law in Africa panel: what was the legacy of colonialism for constitutionalism in Africa? We will consider the ways in which colonialism continues to shape the visions of emancipation that maintain a tenacious hold on the continent by critically interrogating the focus on constitutional rights; state-religion distinction; and the governance of difference.

International Law & Literature at the Edge - 2941

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: The past decade has seen a steady increase in interdisciplinary scholarship interested in the relationships between literature and international law. To date, much of this scholarship has remained separate(d) and unequal: rooted in the home disciplines of scholars and their the prevailing assumptions and methodologies, while often marginalizing events (imperialism, slavery, colonialism) and thinkers in and of the global south as actors and agents of literary and legal world-making (replicating the traditional prejudices of its contributing disciplines). This Roundtable will bring together scholars to explore the mutual imbrications of literature and international law at the edges, in a manner that seeks to avoid these basic disciplinary blindnesses and Eurocentric assumptions and places the global south at the center of their discussions.

International Perspectives on Procedural Justice - 4281

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: Lay perceptions of fair treatment by legal authority – procedural justice – have been systematically connected to people's trust in and willingness to cooperate with the law. In this panel, we bring together data from across different national contexts to understand the impact of procedural justice and emerging court procedures that may improve or threaten fairness perceptions. We present survey data from Dutch criminal defendants, connecting their perceptions of procedural fairness to trust in judges and reduced intention to protest judicial rulings. We also present survey data from China, where algorithmic judging is being increasingly advocated, to consider the implications of divergent perceptions of fairness between human and AI evaluations. We explore data from high schools in the Midwest US to consider how levers of school discipline, including policing, affect student perceptions of safety and fairness. Finally, we evaluate an easy-to-implement feedback intervention that has the potential to give people more voice in the legal process.

From police forces to criminal courts, prosecutorial authorities, and the military, in this session we reflect on the possibilities and limitations of carrying out empirical research on different institutions, in various observation sites, and through several research techniques. The individual papers in this session focus on diverse countries, approach the question of methodology from contrasting perspectives, and invite us to shift scales of analysis; however, they are all confronted with the same question of how to grasp the complexities of criminal justice in the region. The session reflects on the common challenges faced by researchers conducting socio-legal studies on criminal justice bureaucracies in Latin America.

Navigating Separate and Unequal Educational Landscapes: Institutional Challenges and Opportunities for Transformation - 2618

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: Colleges and universities are frequently experienced as separate and unequal institutions by legally marginalized students, including those who are undocumented, asylum seekers, refugees, or attempting to adjust their status. Faculty, staff, and attorneys who work with these students must navigate legal, social, and institutional terrains that conform to or reject the realities of their experiences based on their status and context of arrival and reception. This roundtable presents creative solutions to these bureaucratic and legal hurdles, solutions such as establishing Undocumented Student Resource Centers, developing study abroad programs for legally marginalized students, and devising workarounds through which undocumented students can obtain funding and work experience. Presenters discuss how their research informs their service.

Ocean Legal Geographies - 4035

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: Despite its cutting-edge tendencies, the recent proliferation of ocean studies scholarship, especially in the humanities, rarely engages with legal questions. Such a disregard is especially troubling because of the major role that the law plays at sea and in controlling the human-nature relations that occur there. Perhaps unsurprisingly, legal scholarship is itself filled with terracentric biases and influences, often neglecting questions pertaining to the oceans, their wet and fluid materialities, and the unique forms of governance that ensue. This panel will attempt to rectify this situation, calling for the emergence of a new subfield: ocean legal geographies. Beyond its academic importance, this subfield will be significant for its social, ecological, and political contributions.

Political Histories of Policing in the USA - 2440

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): D

Description: The papers represented in this panel set a historical backdrop against which the relationship between the police, policing, and politics is laid bare. A key focus throughout is the putative service that the police in different jurisdictions have both delivered and withheld. In foregrounding policing's political history, the panel offers productive insights about organizational maneuvering, the construction of the police role, and the status of policing in governance more broadly.

Racial and Economic Justice: Critical Research Approaches and Methodologies for Centering Workers - 3207

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 3

Description: This session examines a variety of people-centered multidisciplinary research approaches and their ethical considerations and political commitments. It aims to highlight how scholars and practitioners conceptualize and engage in community-based research with workers that moves beyond dominant approaches and application of previously accumulated knowledge. Panelists will examine non-exploitative and innovative narrative formations that center the worker perspective, and discuss cultural strategies that seek to amplify and co-produce knowledge. For example, panelists will discuss practices that prioritize local and situated knowledge, mutual inquiry, reflexive critique, collaboratively deciding on research topics, and embracing the emergence of new information and research tools.

Self-managed abortion II: Regulation and criminalization - 3239

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: Since the COVID-19 pandemic, self-managed abortion (SMA) has become more prevalent among pregnant people and more visible in the media and policy discussions. Recent progressive legal reforms and constitutional rulings in Latin America have also contributed to highlighting the vital role that local SMA movements and organizations have played in both guaranteeing access under restrictive laws but also in exposing their injustice and the need for change. Finally, the demise of Roe v. Wade in the USA has forced conversations and practices of abortion to shift from highly medicalized models in clinics to more autonomous models at home, with pills. This session examines how legal regulation and criminalization affects people having self-managed abortion and those who support them.

Supreme Courts Lawyers. Comparative Insights - 1792

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: The purpose of this roundtable is to reflect on the role of lawyers before supreme courts from a law and society perspective. Supreme or constitutional courts, their judges, and the decisions they make are at the heart of legal analysis, and, at the same time, the legal profession is one of the major focuses of socio-legal research. However, the role of lawyers, often specialized, before the highest courts, remains under-researched. This round table aims to remedy this shortcoming, which is found in most national research traditions. The participants will seek to identify the challenges and prospects for the development of research on supreme court lawyers, drawing on national and transnational examples.

The Law Against Communism in Latin America: (Argentina and Colombia) - 2588

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal F

Description: Anti-communism in Latin American during the XX Century had legal facets and different moments. This panel tells the story of manifestations of the 'communist threat' in Argentina and Colombia, as well as the tools, discourses, and actions that were used to face it after the Russian Revolution. To this end, it deals with the Argentine presidential speeches that used the 'fear' and Communism as a political discourse and legal tool, in dictatorial rules as well as democratic regimes; By approaching the global circulation of social ideas, it shows how communism became the main enemy of legal socialism; also the legal struggle against communism in Colombia: including decisions by the Supreme Court, as well as the persecution of communism by the Catholic Church in alliance with State actors during the 'conservative hegemony'.

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar B

Description: Violence against women has been recognised as a national emergency in a number of Commonwealth Countries in recent years. Ensuring women's safety and ending gendered violence have been identified as national priorities, resulting in significant law reform and criminal justice interventions across domestic and family violence and sexual assault. This session draws on the perspectives of interdisciplinary scholars in Australia, Canada, Northern Ireland and England with interrelated research agendas in the politics of violence against women and law reform, as well as in speaking out and listening in law reform and other legal system processes. Panelists will critically reflect on and critique speaking out and listening as paths to, as well as the aims, scope and outcomes of, legal responses to gendered violence in their contexts.

'New Ways of Seeing Like a State' – Change, Critique and Complicity in Global Governance - 1446

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 4

Description: In her 2019 MLR piece, Fleur Johns formulated a diagnosis and a warning. Observing that global governance 'changed course' – tied to a shift from 'planning to prototypes' – Johns argued that the old agents of liberal, modernist reform might have 'blunted or outrun the standard tools of critical, progressive ... international lawyers'. This roundtable – building on a special issue in Law and Critique – thinks through this intervention. Have the 'rhythms and routines' of global governance indeed changed, and how can this redirection be understood? Do these changes signal a 'crisis of critique', and what is the critical repertoire presupposed in this diagnosis? Can we find avenues for different forms of political labour or critical intervention, and which strategic tools and theoretical commitments could guide and sustain such projects?

Author Meets Reader: Death by Prison: The Emergence of Life without Parole and Perpetual Confinement by Christopher Seeds - 2463

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): D

Description: Death by Prison is an ambitious explanation of the rise of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole (LWOP). LWOP has developed into a distinctive and routine penal form in the United States, one firmly entrenched in US policy-making, judicial and prosecutorial decision-making, correctional practice, and public discourse. What explains the shifts in penal practice and social imagination by which we have become accustomed to imprisoning people until death without any reevaluation or expectation of release? Combining a wide historical lens with detailed state- and institutional-level research, Christopher Seeds offers a provocative new foundation for questioning this deeply problematic practice that has escaped scrutiny for too long.

Familial Debt and the Carceral State - 3165

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: Recent research has revealed the vast and varied nature of criminal justice debt--and how it accumulates to weigh down men and women as they reintegrate after prison. Yet far less is known about the effects of this debt on familial networks or how it loops across areas of social life to shape relations of care and wellbeing. This panel conceptualizes carceral debt as a web of relationships that reconfigures an array of familial bonds. From bail to commissary costs to health care expenses to child support, these papers analyze how family members are brought into the web of debt in unique ways. They explore the material and emotional aspects of familial debt--and its racialized and gendered dynamics. Many of the papers come from collaborative work with researchers with direct experience with incarceration and carceral debt.

Foucault and the Law in Socio-Legal Studies - 1516

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal E

Description: This session invites an initial discussion between members of the new CRN on Foucault and Socio-Legal Studies. It features scholars from the North American academy and beyond and the roundtable will address, from the different perspectives of each of the scholars involved, two intersecting sets of questions. The first set of questions is: how do you use Foucault in your socio-legal scholarship? What key methodological insights does Foucault, and the Foucauldian tradition, give you that you draw on in your own work? What are the possibilities for developing a Foucauldian sociology of law? What are the limitations of this project? The second set of questions is: What conception of law or legality do you see in Foucault's own scholarship? What is the current state of the debate about law in Foucault's work?

From Prison Banking to Pay-to-Stay: Asset Seizure and Cost of Incarceration Statutes - 3044

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 3

Description: When the rise of mass incarceration caused prison costs to skyrocket, states and local governments looked for ways to cover their budget gaps and – increasingly over time – turned to individuals to cover the cost of their own imprisonment. The proliferation of so-called 'pay-to-stay' laws has allowed for a large-scale, racialized wealth extraction by seizing assets from individuals working to build a post-prison future. Today, every state has some version of pay-to-stay in place. The tide, however, is shifting, as activists challenge both the moral and policy logic that drove these practices, while scholars highlight the impacts and troubled history of these laws. This paper session addresses how pay-to-stay impacts vulnerable populations, its modes of enforcement, current reform efforts, and the constitutionality of monetary sanctions.

Global Data Law & Justice - 2503

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: Data is not just a commodity but a medium of power and ordering. Whether data is seen as an economic commodity, a strategic or proprietary asset, a collective good, or a social practice determines the regime through which data is governed, who is governing it, and for whose benefit. Different qualities with which data is imagined thus also determine the nature of the institutions that are being proposed to regulate data. 'Thinking infrastructurally' enables us to explore the co-constitutive interaction of legal, social, organizational, and technical practices that enable different data infrastructures and their relationship for power. This roundtable will explore these conjectures in depth. We will ask: How should data be conceptualized for purposes of regulation? How can global data governance be (re-)oriented towards justice?

Law, Immigration, and Empire - 4354

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): A

Description: This panel examines the long history of imperial and colonial control of space and policing of borders in the United States and the territories that preceded it. The papers explore how colonizing powers, including the United States, have used law to take possession of land and exert control over that space newly render the colonizer's territory. The papers also indicate at least three directions of conflict: between colonizer and colonized, between different colonizing powers, and between different authorities within colonizing projects over how to best enact that project. This raises questions about how law has been a device within and marked by each of these different directions of conflict, as well as a vehicle for minimizing the memory of empire and colonialism within the dominant culture.

Each paper employs the Archimedes' Lever model (Payne, et. al., 2020) in analyzing how historically marginalized groups have confronted more powerful state and non-state actors in attempting to expand rights. Specific examples explored by the panel include indigenous women's social movements in Honduras and Canada, participatory democracy organizations in Colombia, disappeared persons in Mexico, corporate accountability in Argentina, and several historically marginalized groups (women, LGBT+, environmental, BIPOC, refugees and asylum-seekers, and human rights victims) in a variety of countries. The papers explore the strategies employed by such groups in successfully challenging veto players who seek to limit their rights.

Description: This panel explores empirical work on psychological influences to decision-making and perceptions in contexts related to criminal courts, sentencing, and incarceration. First, we address how lay perceivers' sense of moral panic relates to their feelings about and support for punishment of differing drug offenses. Then, we then shift to judges' own consideration of their duty to balance their personal attitudes and their perceived role of impartiality. We further present observational data of sentencing decisions in Canada, highlighting disparate sentencing of Indigenous peoples. Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Description: In an LSA panel in 2019, leading scholars of Russia and China came together to talk about the possibilities and pitfalls of doing big(ger) data work in authoritarian settings. Over the ensuing years because of COVID and increased repression in both countries, the conditions for on-the-ground research have become even more difficult than the practical and ethical questions that prompted the 2019 panel. In this roundtable, we revisit the discussion about the utility and opportunities for using big data techniques to examine the law in authoritarian settings, while adding additional authoritarian contexts in Africa. Separate, (Un)Equal, and Unapologetically Religious: Religious Challenges to the Secular State - 3290

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal F

Description: Many religious doctrines are premised on theological ideas of gender, racial, and ethnic separation. In the past few decades, however, these concepts have come under scrutiny by courts, both within the US and abroad, forcing religious communities to reconsider their values. In the US, the Supreme Court revoked the tax-exempt status of a religious university who prohibited interracial dating among its students. In Israel, courts are weighing the constitutionality of gender separation in public transportation, public events, and institutions of higher education that cater to religious communities. In considering the future of religious doctrine that stands in opposition to the secular, liberal values of the modern state, this panel will also consider its implications on the separation of church and state.

Translating Food Sovereignty: Cultivating Justice in an Age of Transnational Governance - 1799

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 5

Description: In its current state, the global food system is socially and ecologically unsustainable. While agro-industrial production is promoted as the solution to these problems, growing global 'food sovereignty' movements instead demand local and democratic control over food systems. Translating Food Sovereignty accompanies activists based in the Pacific Northwest of the United States as they mobilize the claim of food sovereignty across local, regional, and global arenas of governance. It reveals how activists leverage the neoliberal transnational order of networked governance to make more expansive social justice claims. This nuanced, deeply engaged ethnography illustrates how food sovereignty activists are cultivating new forms of transnational governance from the ground up.

Two Legal Academies: Separate and Unequal Still - 3476

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: This roundtable will explore systemic inequities in legal academia, focusing on status and pay disparity between tenured and contract faculty. By design or accident, law schools have created two seemingly 'separate but equal' faculty tracks, however the purported equality is illusory. The inequities of the two track academic paths undergird notions of patriarchy, white supremacy, and power as the tenured cadre is predominantly male, white, and academically 'elite,' while contract faculty are almost exclusively women & people of color. Similar to extraction of rights & power from unincorporated U.S. territories, this discussion group seeks to use the Separate and Unequal lens to understand how the relationship of power and privilege within academic institutions and legal education perpetuates power and privilege in the rule of law itself.

Understanding Race and Caste: Convergences and Divergences - 2650

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: Historically, changing socioeconomic conditions have led to more interaction between Western nations and the rest of the world, expanding the possibility for exploiting unexplored resources, unequal politico-legal relationships. Even though the term 'racism' was connected with discrimination of Jewish people, the 'one drop' rule in America traced segregation and discrimination against Black people for a very long time. The ideological basis of Karma and other superstitious reasoning sustains segregation by a small dominant group for thousands of years reflected in and an integral part of the caste system. It is against this backdrop that this book project aims to understand the similarities and divergences constituting horizontal and vertical spectra of discrimination, exclusion, and segregation of racism and casteism.

Urban Land Use and Reform - 3555

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 12:45-2:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal G

Description: The papers in this session examine issues of property use reform with an emphasis on urban property. Issues of zoning, housing, and the fragmentation of property through inheritance are systemic in cities and often impede the ability of local governments to address issues of housing, business growth, as well as the ability of property owners to buy, sell, and use their property. Drawing on socio-legal research the authors in this session address issues of land use, reform, and land sales.

Apartheid, neo-apartheid and decolonization: from South Africa to Palestine and back - 2965

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: Critical South African scholars have long highlighted how the juridical dismantling of apartheid failed to address the racialized economic and social inequalities and structures that proliferated under the white supremacist regime. They emphasize the continuing need for a decolonization politics encompassing land and wealth redistribution, radical new approaches to knowledge production, deeper introspection on colonial legacies and post-conquest legal and political imaginaries. In parallel, Palestine studies scholars have questioned the axiom of post-apartheid South Africa as a model of liberation, arguing that its lessons on the challenges and imperatives of decolonization must be better understood. This panel brings together scholars working in both contexts to discuss common struggles, complementary analyses and decolonial futures.

Author Meets Readers: Brandon del Pozo's Police and the State - 2493

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): D

Description: Brandon del Pozo's The Police and the State (Cambridge 2022) builds bridges between political philosophy and policing. Invoking his vast experience as a police officer in New York City and police chief in Burlington, Vermont, del Pozo argues that we all have the prerogative to use force to protect others, but police embody the government's unique duty to do so effectively and with restraint. del Pozo recasts order maintenance as brokering and enforcing the fair terms of social cooperation in our public spaces, for the protection of minority interests, and for a society where diverse conceptions of the good can flourish. The reasons of police must be ones that all citizens can evaluate as equals. The Police and the State explains the democratic commitments of policing and lays the groundwork for meaningful police innovation and reform.

Comparative Perspectives on Law, Gender, and Power in the Twentieth Century - 4355

Date and Time:

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo C

Description: The papers on this panel investigate multiple countries as well as international law, examining topics including abortion rights, domestic violence, discrimination, consent, and sexual violence. Each paper presents an account of gendered political conflicts playing out within legal institution as well as shaping legal institutions. In each example, gender appears as a pattern of social power which is contested and in flux. Law serves less to stabilize gendered social relations and more as a specific forum for gender-as-politics. As a whole the panel demonstrates the analytical power of research on gendered legal politics as well as the intense human-level stakes of these contests in law and society.

Faculty Unionization in Legal Education: Recent Trends in Canada and Québec - 3007

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 3

Description: There has been a notable increase in efforts to organize university professors in recent years. The Canadian province of Québec was well ahead of the curve, as nearly all universities have had faculty unions since the 1970s. The one exception was McGill University, Québec's most notable English-language institution. In 2022, professors in the McGill Faculty of Law, a bilingual (English/French) faculty, succeeded in gaining certification for the first faculty union in the university's history. In this roundtable, members of the executives of the newly-created faculty union and of the existing (non-union) faculty association, a professor of Québec labour law, and the attorney who represented the union will discuss the reasons for and process of organizing the law faculty, and the merits of the case before the Québec labour law tribunal.

Federalism and Abortion Rights in the Americas. IRC 12 - 2230

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: In federal systems, policy reform and implementation of reproductive rights are determined in a wide range of venues including subnational and national legislatures, courts, and healthcare bureaucracies. What factors explain how and where decisions on abortion rights are made in federal regimes? How do the different arenas affect movement and countermovement dynamics, territorial inequities, and access to reproductive rights in federal countries? What factors influence subnational compliance with national laws and judicial decisions? What role has abortion politics played in democratic backsliding in the Continent's federations? This panel aims to answer these questions with analysis of the politics of abortion rights in the largest federal countries in the Americas: Brazil, Mexico, Argentina, Canada, and the United States.

Forensic Science and the Courts - 4282

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: This panel highlights both how the public evaluates forensic science, and how forensic scientists themselves may be impacted by extralegal factors. We consider how contextual information biases the decisions of forensic firearms examiners from US crime laboratories. We further consider broader threats to forensic decision validity and propose a new vision for the crime lab that partners forensic experts with behavioral scientists. We next present archival research on how EEG has been used in courts, discussing implications for perceptions of legal culpability. Finally, we present the results of a jury simulation experiment testing how jurors reason about complex scientific evidence; we demonstrate how individual differences in jurors' reasoning affects how they engage with scientific evidence in the deliberation process.

Healing, Reconciliation, and Reparative Action - 3926

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo B

Description: Reconciliation seeks to repair injuries caused by past wrongs that have harmed disfavored groups or communities. While barriers to reparation and reconciliation are significant, responsive actions are the subject of a growing number of legal and/or political claims by groups seeking redress. Reparation and reconciliation can be transformative social actions. Papers in this panel approach restoration from different empirical perspectives: recognition of a history of abusive law enforcement; the failure of the victims' rights movement to address the needs of Black survivors of crime; distrust between the local Black community and a powerful Ivy League university. Lastly, a theoretical piece posits that a novel perspective may bridge the gap between reform-centered approaches and full-scale abolition, which has trouble gaining traction.

How Economic Power Shapes Legal Structures, and Vice Versa - 1399

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal F

Description: Decades of compounding economic inequalities and crises have brought new scholarly attention to structures of economic power. This panel asks questions about how legal environments confer economic power and, conversely, how economic power can secure legal power. The presentations will examine structures of economic and legal power in three contexts: landlord-tenant relationships; state-organized debt collection; and the regulations that structure civil courts. Together, the papers in this panel seek to bring forward new insights about the institutional and systemic durability of inequality and-through empirical and theoretical inquiry- to offer new avenues for understanding the mutual construction of legal and economic power.

Description: Over the past two years, the antimajoritarian worldview and agenda underlying the January 6, 2021 insurrection has been normalized and assimilated into political discourse to a considerable degree. This roundtable will examine the reverberations within legal and judicial discourse of this growing illiberalism in political discourse in the United States. How should we conceptualize judicial illiberalism as a phenomenon? What are its deeper roots and connections to illiberalism outside the judiciary? How has judicial illiberalism concretely manifest itself in specific contexts? Participants will explore these questions in areas including executive power, election law, law and religion, civil rights, federalism, and immigration law. Lawyers and State Transformations - 1717

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: This session (and IRC) brings together scholars working on the interaction between lawyers and state transformations. The session suggests shifting the focus from the category of legal professions towards an exploration of state transformations. It examines the symbiosis between the relative autonomy of the legal field and the legitimation of state power, stressing the key role of intermediation played by lawyers in the formation of state power. The session suggests that the comparative historical analysis of national fields of state power can help shed light on the structure and transformation of national legal fields. This requires tracing legacies of the past – imperialism and colonialism – in politics of the present, but also acknowledging the interconnectedness between state trajectories.

Prisons of Debt: The Afterlives of Incarcerated Fathers - 3178

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical B

Description: From the back of the book: In the first study of its kind, Lynne Haney travels into state institutions across the country to document the experiences of the millions of fathers cycling through the criminal justice and child support systems. Prisons of Debt shows how these systems work together to create complex entanglements and feedback loops of disadvantage. Through moving accounts of men struggling to be fathers, it exposes how the criminalization of child support undermines the most essential of familial relationships. Based on observations of 1,200 child support cases and interviews with 145 indebted fathers in New York, California, and Florida, it reveals the actual practices of child support adjudication and enforcement--as well as how poor men are too often denied their rights of citizenship and of fatherhood.

Racial Capitalism and Climate Justice - 1707

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): C

Description: According to racial capitalism, racism and capitalism are inextricably intertwined. Capitalism uses racism to stratify populations to facilitate profit-making and continuously reconfigures existing hierarchies and creates new hierarchies in its quest for profit. Fueled by the colonization of the Americas and the transatlantic slave trade, racial capitalism degrades both nature and persons racialized as non-white through its insatiable greed for cheap labor, cheap raw materials, and cheap waste disposal. By no means a coincidence, climate change affects minority and marginalized communities disproportionately, the very communities that were colonized and racialized. Thus, racial capitalism and climate justice are also inextricably intertwined. This roundtable will examine the relevance of racial capitalism to climate justice.

Regimes of Discretion in U.S. Immigration Law - 2796

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo C

Description: In U.S. immigration law, several agencies and individuals possess a right to discretionary action vis-à-vis unauthorized immigrants. This panel will explore the dynamics of discretion within immigration enforcement regimes--examining the difference it makes when discretion is located in distinct institutional positions, looking at the harms that can be inflicted by both discriminatory discretion and the removal of discretionary capacity, and the social and cultural determinants of discretionary decisions. Growing awareness of discretion and its role in the immigration enforcement system can enhance the capacity to manage and regulate it. One of the aims of this panel will be to contribute to the understanding of first, how discretion manifests into actions and second, possibilities for intervention.

Rethinking Carceral Experiences from India - 3315

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: The Indian criminal legal system is notorious for having a disparate impact on marginalized communities. The colonial continuity of the criminal justice system, including prisons, is visible in the attitudes toward crime and punishment in independent India. The overrepresentation of marginalized communities creates pockets of inequality and discrimination in carceral institutions, despite a formally equal legal system. However, public discourse around criminal justice in India is aimed at carceral expansion, aimed at addressing the problem of 'rising crimes'. In this panel, we seek to steer this debate to probe whether the carceral system can ever be an effective site for providing 'justice'. Critically analyzing the Indian criminal legal system from different perspectives, we emphasize the need for decarceral approaches.

The War in Court: Inside the Long Fight against Torture by Lisa Hajjar - 1194

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 2:45-4:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar B

Description: In The War in Court, sociologist Lisa Hajjar traces the fight against US torture policy by lawyers who brought the 'war on terror' into courts. Their victories, though few and far between, forced the government to change the way prisoners were treated and focused attention on state crimes perpetrated in the shadows. If not for these lawyers and their allies, US torture would have gone unchallenged because elected officials and the American public, with a few exceptions, did nothing to oppose it. This war in court has been fought to defend the principle that there is no legal right to torture. Told as a suspenseful, high-stakes story, The War in Court clearly outlines why challenges to the torture policy had to be waged on the legal terrain and why hundreds of lawyers joined the fight.

Description: The papers focus on gender, sexuality, and reproduction to examine how conservative or right-wing activists have used courts to reshape law and intimate lives. Denbow examines the financial and ideological interests of groups shaping assisted reproductive technology in a post-Dobbs era. Denbow argues that their efforts are informed by ableist and eugenicist logics. Dudas argues that the embrace of reactionary ideas about sex and gender by the Court conceals a factional constitutional revolution. Rasmussen examines debates around

Digital Development(alism) - 3534

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: Although often ushered with the optimistic rhetoric of 'transformation' & 'digital revolution', the impacts of digitization on economic, social, cultural & political development remain understudied & their economic theories unsettled. Still, multilateral development banks (MDBs) are increasingly conceiving of development as data and digital infrastructures, uncritically embracing the creation, management, and financing of digital infrastructures. These include the creation of digital products such as cloud-based platforms and AI models, funding of large-scale digital infrastructures like digital IDs, e-health, and e-government infrastructures, and investments in private sector enterprises that offer a particular digital product or technology. What are the global governance implications of this turn to data-as-development?

Entrepreneurship and New Firm Governance - 3390

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 7

Description: This session brings together a set of papers exploring the role of law in the creation of new business ventures. The papers highlight the diversity of entrepreneurial ventures and the multiplexity of those ventures' relationships to law. These studies offer a valuable complement to other work on the role of law in the economy, much of which focuses on the regulation of large, mature firms. Entrepreneurial start-ups often lack the coordinated lobbying presence of more established businesses; however, they hold greater potential both for economic disruption and for individual agency. Thus, the capacity of law to facilitate or foreclose new firm formation – like the capacity of law to facilitate or foreclose other forms of creativity and deviance – is an essential component of the relationship between law and social change.

Gender and Political Economy Roundtable II: Transnational and Comparative Perspective - 4562

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Ceiba

Description: This roundtable, as part of the International Research Collaborative on Gender and Political Economy (GPE), will bring together comparative perspectives on the relationship between gender roles and the legal, social and cultural norms and institutions that shape markets and economies during rapidly changing times. With growing awareness of wealth and income inequality in both developed and developing countries, the time is ripe for study of how social groupings around gender, sex and sexuality relate to economic inequality analysis. The objective is to critically interrogate assumptions embedded in current approaches to gender and the political economy with a view to contributing to a framework for a comprehensive distributional analysis of gender in the law, and to do so in a way that attends to both the role of theory in action.

Governance, Health, and Equity: Choices and Effects - 4433

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical A

Description: Anjali Deshmukh rethinks the tort claim of innovator liability as applied to a name brand for unlisted safety problems when users are harmed by generic drugs. Lisa Grow and Brigham Daniels address how politicians took advantage of health disparities rooted in the subordination of racial minorities to increase racial inequalities in voting in 2020. Uchechukwu Ngwaba addresses how the Inter-American Human Rights System can be changed to better prepare for future pandemics in light of flaws exposed by COVID-19. Desai Shan shows how labor regulatory failures endangered seafarers' health and safety during the pandemic. And Daniel Weinstock challenges the concept of subsidiary, suggesting a more complex picture of power relations and pressures in deciding where to place the power to act in the public health

Just and Sustainable Energy Transition in Puerto Rico. - 2587

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): A

Description: Puerto Rico (P.R.) is facing an energy transition. As a colony of the U.S.A, P.R. has limited decision power over the current resource administration and its future. Locally, the elite have been enablers of the business-as-usual model and supported an unsustainable model for the renewable energy transition. Suppose these practices and unspoken consensus about the Renewable Energy Transition continue. In that case, it will replicate the same power dynamics and social and environmental failures of the existing fossil fuels system. To tackle the issue, stakeholders should discuss questions such as: Who will benefit from the transition? Which are the mechanisms to achieve it? Who should be leading the transition? Which sectors should take part in it? How will the most vulnerable population be protected in the process?

Juvenile (In)justice in Missouri - 3194

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal D

Description: Juveniles charged with crimes in the United States occupy a no-mans land in the justice system. Not children worthy of juvenile court protection, but also not adults deserving of maximum punishment, the barriers to justice for criminally-charged juveniles are many. Our interdisciplinary team from St. Louis University, consisting of clinical law professors, a social worker, and a staff attorney, will discuss the common threads that run through the lifecycle of a juvenile case, the ways that the law and legal system normalize racism even with children in our legal system, and we will compare what is happening to juveniles in Missouri with national and international customs and practices.

Lawyers and Democratic Backsliding - 3900

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: From the rights revolution in the 1960s to the global emergence of cause lawyers in the 1990s, legal professionals were heralded as guardians of liberal democracy. As the liberal-democratic consensus wanes and elected leaders target courts and the rule of law, what has been the role of legal professionals? Have they stood up for liberal-democratic values or have they supported the erosion of democracies from within? Drawing from case studies from the US, Hungary, and Brazil, authors in this panel will address those pressing questions and identify issues that merit future attention in comparative research on lawyers and democratic backsliding.

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: This Panel will consider the place of sentiment and affect in international life generally, and its projects and promises of 'international justice' in particular. What role does sentiment and affect (rage, pity, shame, passion) play in mobilizing these projects and the 'assemblages' of international justice more generally? Who is mobilized, and who is demobilized? Whose sentiment and affect counts, and whose is discounted? Does the affective economy of 'international justice' track the uneven legal, political, social and cultural structures of the international order, or can it resist and reverse them? Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal E

Description: This roundtable engages with this year's theme 'Separate and Unequal' from a legal geographies perspective. We will explore how legal geographies contribute to the overarching theme through contributions dealing from local property regimes to colonial endeavours, crossing scales in search for justice. Separate and unequal has been at the core of legal geographies and in this session we will extrapolate the denominators of violence imposed through legal geographies and temporalities and invoke questions on possibilities for spatial and temporal justice.

The Law and Political Economy of Degrowth - 3772

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 8, 9, 10

Description: Our entire economic order is built on the idea of growth. This idea is not least sustained by legal provisions, from the right to property to the objective of price stability, from labor relations to international economic law. Despite warnings about the limits of the economics of growth since the 1970s, many governments and policy regimes cling to it even as we approach climate disaster. The idea of sustainable growth does not seem to stand the test of practice. It is therefore likely that humanity will have to shift to a degrowth economy, or be forced to shift to it as the earth gets increasingly uninhabitable. The roundtable will investigate how the law might prevent, moderate, or facilitate the transition. Contributions will cover the history & the present; common goods & the common good; money & rights; intentions & outcomes.

Date and Time: Saturday, June 3rd, 4:45-6:30pm

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal C

Description: This panel will explore ways in which social concepts and narratives are produced and reproduced in post-authoritarian regimes in relation to historical injustice, authoritarianism, and violence. Through a range of case studies, the papers challenge binary and unnuanced approaches to innocent-guilty and victimhood construction, expand our notion of participation, question the concept of political apologies, and shed light on the power dynamics behind naming places and communities as toxic or marginalized. The first paper will challenge conventional notions of victimhood in transitional justice, drawing from a case study of Northern Ireland. The second paper will present a dialogical model for assuring a reparative process that involves meaningful and effective participation of victims in determining appropriate reparations. Addressing Bias in Evidence Rule 609's Use of Prior Convictions for Impeachment and Questioning 'Credibility' Assessments of Witnesses Generally - 2632

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: We consider credibility in evidence law, addressing Fed. R. Evid. 609, which permits impeachment by prior convictions. After presenting R. 609 and discussing its doctrinal flaws, social harms, and prospects for reform, we address the effect of R. 609, focusing on how it reinforces structural racism and unconscious bias, chilling willingness to testify. We consider wider questions of credibility, including policing and bias, and how police accounts are privileged and deemed credible. Additionally, we explore different ideas of credibility through the lens of two recent Supreme Court oral arguments, which reveal a lack of shared understanding regarding 'credibility.' Finally, it considers questions of reform through an abolitionist lens, examining how proposed reforms might entrench the failed system of criminal law and punishment.

Contemporary Challenges for Democracy and Human Rights - 2328

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): E

Description: The challenges for democracy and human rights are expansive and well known-right-wing national extremism (e.g., Christian nationalism), growing economic inequality, rapidly changing information technology, and loss of faith in liberal political institutions. How we respond to these challenges is less apparent. Do we renew our commitment to political liberalism? Do we rethink how we understand group conflict and the possibilities for responding to it? Do the transformative revolutions of information science and communications technologies require reimagining the institutions of democracy? Do we need to explore the possibilities of a pluralistic, postsecular foundation for democracy and human rights? The papers in this session seek to respond to these questions and provide new ways of reimagining liberal democracy and human rights.

Evict: Combining Data Science and Law to Study the International Right to Housing - 1287

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): B

Description: The past global financial crisis and current housing crisis have led to a significant increase in the number of evictions. In the Global South, evictions are omnipresent due to conflicts and urban development. In the Global North, evictions are on the rise due to social inequality and discrimination. In addition, a growing number of people face obstacles and (unbreakable) barriers in their search for adequate housing. In this paper session, researchers from the (ERC funded) EVICT project will shed their light on the role of the international right to housing in protecting the power- and propertyless. By combining traditional legal research with data science, the researchers go far beyond the state of the art to understand and explain the impact of the international right to housing.

Gendered Dimensions of Exclusion and Representation - 4367

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo D

Description: Just as law can be a tool for the simultaneous inclusion and exclusion of categories, also visual arts, scholarly reflections, and political discourse can partake in similar forms of inclusion–exclusion. The panel looks at this topic by exploring the gendered dimensions of representation and exclusion. The themes covered by the panel span the ongoing invisibility of women's art in leading texts in the field of Law and Art, and the ways in which artistic exhibitions invite us to reflect on the normalizing and exclusionary power of law. They furthermore include aggressively exclusionary xenophobic and sexist discourse by illiberal actors, and how court decisions that are hailed as a victory by feminist observers can still fail to advance equality for disabled adults.

Incorporating, Embedding, Implementing, Vernacularizing: Making Law Meaningful at the Local Level - 2546

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal C

Description: How does law become real, moving from parchment promises to constraining institutions? Under what conditions does law expand, contract, or take on new meanings? Each of the papers on this panel takes on these questions in different settings, examining the process by which constitutional, comparative, or international law came to shape expectations and behavior. Papers explore the following topics: changing understandings of democracy and citizenship in the New Deal-era United States; efforts by radical social movements to pursue rights protections for nature; the factors that shape the ability and willingness of Black South Africans to pursue social rights claims in the courts; the impact of labor unions and international treaties on child labor practices in Latin America; and how new constitutional rights provisions develop over time.

Law and Politics in Late Twentieth Century America - 4353

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – San Gerónimo B

Description: Law and politics do not reduce to each other but neither are they subject to a strict delineation. Rather, law is often a medium through which people do politics, and politics is often a conflict over what law should or should not be. This panel examines four different locations and vocabularies in which people did politics with law in the late twentieth century United States – the sociological production of knowledge about criminal law, the origins and uses of originalism, grant-making federal agencies, and universities. The papers together paint a picture of legal politics as drawing on, influenced by, and influencing a range of social movements and expert forms of knowledge.

Legal Anthropology and the Genealogical Method - 2077

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): C

Description: This panel examines the genealogical method in legal anthropology. Genealogy provides a picture of historical analysis that is not linear nor teleological but rather dispersed and contingent, allowing scholars to interrogate taken-for-granted legal concepts, forms, and mechanisms that underlie claims about social order. This panel attends to how anthropologists produce legal genealogies by ethnographically investigating situated sources in field sites within different (trans)national legal systems. Each paper looks beyond judicial opinions, treatises, and statutes to examine minor documents and unlikely sources of evidence, including those not strictly considered legal. In so doing, the panel asks: How do the specificities of field sites, interlocutors, and documents guide what genealogies of law and legal concepts might look like?

Race and Federal Judicial Process - 3352

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal G

Description: The role of that federal courts in progressive and regressive racial movements in U.S. history has been studied in many corners- e.g., law, history, political science. Their role in the Reconstruction, Jim Crow Era, Civil Rights and post-Civil Rights Eras has been documented and debated. Less examined, particularly in era marked by the rise and maturation of critical inquiries about race and law, is the racial dimension of so-called trans-substantive areas of law. Recently this has begun to change in areas such as civil procedure and administrative law. This panel brings together federal courts scholars who seek to interrogate the history, doctrine and rhetoric of federal courts jurisdictional reach through a racial-critical lens.

Race, Empire, Capitalism and the Constitution - 1709

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Garita

Description: Constitutional law is a product of colonial legacies, a global racial order and the generalisation of capitalism. There are discernible Eurocentric vernaculars within the discipline, made possible by settlement and conquest. Eurocentric and imperial constitutional law thus operates through various techniques of governance vested in 'status quo constitutionalism': including colonial ontologies and epistemologies, white supremacy, racial capitalism, and Indigenous genocide and dispossession. These techniques are made visible domestically through liberal conceptions of rule of law, constituent power, sovereignty, rights and constitutionalism. These techniques are further configured by global and international institutions. We explore why and how to engage in anti-colonial praxis in the context of constitutional law.

Reforming the Criminal Legal System: Exploring Discretion, Punishment, and Equity - 4490

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd Floor: Magüey

Description: This panel explores punishment, sentencing reform, and discretion in the criminal legal system. The first paper investigates legislative reform to encourage alternatives to incarceration, showing that expanding judicial discretion actually increased sentences and penalties. The second paper explores the expansion of electronic monitoring in the US, and its disproportionate impacts on people of color. The third paper addresses how various forms of bias limit access to executive clemency. Lastly, the fourth and fifth papers address systemic racism in the Canadian criminal legal system and the impacts of attempted reforms on sentencing and incarcerated youth. Together, these papers address the limitations of existing reform efforts and propose solutions to make legal systems more equitable.

Separation and Inequality among Children and Youth in the Swedish Welfare State - 1284

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): A

Description: The Swedish general elections in September 2022 resulted in a right-wing coalition enjoying support from the far-right. Their mutual policy agenda underscores the need to 'integrate' children and youth of migrant backgrounds as well as delineating access to welfare. If or when this agenda is turned into legislation, it is likely to increase legal and social separation within the Swedish welfare state. This separation would constitute a shift away from the core of the Swedish welfare-state model: social equity and universalist solutions to social challenges. This session is organized by the Stockholm Centre for the Rights of the Child and brings together paper presentations focusing on past, present and future challenges regarding separation and inequality among children and youth within the Swedish welfare state.

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): Caribe

Description: This Author Meets Reader Session will discuss Francesca Lessa's new book, 'The Condor Trials: Transnational Repression and Human Rights in South America' (Yale University Press, 2022). Through the voices of survivors and witnesses, human rights activists, judicial actors, journalists, and historians, Lessa unravels both the secrets of transnational repression masterminded by South American dictators between 1969 and 1981 and shows how networks of justice seekers gradually materialized and effectively transcended national borders to achieve justice for the victims of the horrors committed by Operation Condor. The readers, who are leading experts in their fields, bring together a variety of perspectives from their disciplinary backgrounds, including law, transitional justice, international relations, and Latin American Studies.

U.S. Immigration Prosecution: Priorities, Discretion, and Resistance - 4458

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 8-9:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo B

Description: This panel brings together multi-disciplinary explorations of immigration prosecutions in the United States. Drawing from doctrinal, historical, and/or qualitative methods, the papers train a critical lens on the mental-health-crises-to-deportation pipeline; the use of prosecutorial discretion in immigration court; and evolutions of truth and race in judicial fact-finding. Authors will also discuss the logics adopted by individual ICE officers as well as resistance strategies of immigrant defendants and their attorneys.

Civil Rights and Students: How Social, Legal, and Political Structures Perpetuate Inequalities in U.S. Public Schools. An Exploration of Education Policy Related to Discriminatory Practices. - 3313

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Salón del Mar A

Description: Identify the Issue/Subject of the Roundtable: We will critically examine how case law is eventually translated into school policy that impacts students from historically marginalized populations. In addition to case law, we explore the political and social dynamics that also affect students' civil rights in public schools. In doing so, we will discuss how these structures can perpetuate separate and unequal educational experiences. Importance of the Subject and Relate it to the Conference Theme: The topics we will explore are particularly significant as they are present in current educational debates and topics that are being addressed by federal courts across the country. These debates and court decisions impact school policy. The roundtable presentations align with the conference theme as we explore separate and unequal rules.

Climate Regulation 2 - 4381

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical B

Description: The Law and Climate Change CRN is organizing a set of five panels. The sessions aim to discuss several dimensions of the climate crisis. This year, we will have three panels dedicated to climate justice and two sessions focused on climate regulation. We will also combine studies centered on the Global North and Global South that explore these issues from a comparative perspective. The authors come from multiple disciplines, which will help talk about climate-related problems and the roles of legal actors, institutions, and organizations in addressing these issues from an interdisciplinary background. This is the fifth panel of this year's meeting.

Combating Evolving Forms of Hierarchy - 3281

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal B

Description: As western democracies become more racially and ethnically diverse, dominant classes mobilize to preserve group hierarchy. These new reactionary movements raise questions regarding the efficacy of legal redress. Some scholars contend that traditional democratic norms sufficiently protect subjugated classes from evolving threats. The expansion of group-based inequality undermines their positive assessment. Socially advantaged groups have successfully employed legal authority to oppress migrants, the poor, racial subordinates, women, and sexual/gender minorities. The papers in this session explore these issues in the context of constitutional theory, the carceral state, subjugation of workers, and repression of liberationist speech. The authors propose new analytical frameworks to make law responsive to evolving forms of hierarchy.

CRN33 Thematic Session: Separate and Unequal in East Asia and Beyond - 2794

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Tropical A

Description: Puerto Rico constitutes the 'separate & unequal territory within the U.S. empire,' as the US annexed Puerto Rico during the War of 1898. In the same year, the U.S. also invaded Cuba, Hawaii & the Philippines. The CRN33 Thematic Session adopted the theme of the 2023 LSA Conference & invited participants to reflect on ways that laws normalize sexual discrimination & inequalities in Asia. The Thematic Session focuses on the relationship among law, gender & society in Asia, & chose 4 papers: (1) Divorce Petitions of Trafficked Women Denied: (Xiangning Xu, Brown, US); (2) The Legal Response to Racial Harassment and Incitement to Racial Violence (Junko Kotani, Shizuoka, Japan); (3) Ambivalent Identity: Incorporated but unequal (Seonwha Kim, Supreme Court, Korea); (4) We are not Afraid of Legal Discrimination (Qian Liu, Calgary, Canada).

Family Law & Cultural Norms Across the Globe - 2511

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Wave Wing – 2nd floor: Guayacán

Description: Families and the laws that define and regulate them reflect local and global cultural norms at the foundation of society and help drive societal change. Unfortunately, many aspects of family law regulation continue to normalize individual and group-based discrimination and inequality. As norms and laws impacting interpersonal relationships evolve, examining and assessing how these changes intersect with power and privilege is essential. This roundtable brings together authors and editors of recently published edited collections to discuss and debate the current state and future of family law. Drawing from their scholarship and reflecting on current and historical data, the roundtable participants will analyze the outcomes of family norms and rules and propose approaches to regulating or deregulating families that address the current in

Police and Court Behavior - 4514

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal C

Description: Current research on policing, and Supreme Court decisions affecting policing, continues to add to our knowledge of police behavior under different circumstances. This panel presents empirical findings on three aspects of police and court behavior: the difference that gender makes in police use of force; the difference that the Supreme Court's decision in Heien v. North Carolina, enlarging the meaning of 'reasonable' searches, has made in lower courts applying the Court's standard; and the difference that injuries to a police-person's partner makes in the possibility of future misconduct.

Police Violence: Calls for Reform - 4515

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Garden Wing – San Cristóbal E

Description: The continuing problem of excessive police violence against unarmed victims has generated many calls for reform. This panel presents several viewpoints on the recruitment, presence and training of police: an innovative method for measuring the degree of police recruitment and retention problems; a consideration of bias against minority and indigenous students by School Resource Officers in Canada and the implications of such bias for their allocation in schools; exploration of a uniform disciplinary policy for federal law enforcement agents, rather than the current decentralized approach; and consideration of a multidimensional set of criteria for measuring attitudes toward police, including the affective meaning of police, expectations for police, and trust in police.

Sexual Proceduralism: Rescripting Sex through Consent Protocols, Forms, and Technologies - 1563

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Flamingo A

Description: In the wake of the #MeToo movement, institutions have increasingly embraced procedural approaches to preventing harmful sex. This panel explores sexual proceduralism, manifested in body safety instructions, consent capacity assessments, [Niina's example] and sex-tech commerce. These procedures are deployed with the lofty goal of rewriting damaging cultural scripts in order to bring about a new age of 'sexual citizenship.' Sexual proceduralism uses various strategies to achieve these goals, including encouraging individuals to routinize permission-seeking; developing tests of an individual's capacity to give consent; and asking individuals to render their intentions legible to bureaucracies and institutional authorities. This panel explores the political and ethical stakes of these movements.

Shifting Gears: An Interdisciplinary Approach for Integrating DEIJ Throughout Curriculum - 4359

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Gran Salón Los Rosales (parking garage): A

Description: With the increasing demand for diversity, equity, inclusion, and justice (DEIJ) in the classroom, it is more important than ever to have conversations on integrating DEIJ strategies across the curriculum. Long gone are the days of relegating topics such as race, gender, and LGBTQ+ issues to special courses or insular seminars. Our pedagogical discussion is grounded in decades of combined experience in higher education across a variety of disciplines such as business, liberal arts, and law. Join us in exploring interdisciplinary strategies for incorporating DEIJ in the undergraduate, graduate, and law school classrooms.

Visibilizing the Invisible: Law, Carcerality, and Resistance - 2807

Date and Time: Sunday, June 4th, 10-11:45am

Room: Beach Wing – Conference Center 8, 9, 10

Description: In the face of continued violence and oppression of marginalized communities we offer reflections on the limits of the law in seeking justice, and the necessity of centering those on the periphery. Focusing on the prison system, policing, and migration this roundtable brings to light the criminalizing and racializing effects of legal reforms. It begins with a discussion on the politics of reform around the California prison system and the ways in which pandemic responses exacerbated the criminalization of vulnerable communities. We then discuss the criminalization of Central American communities and the reforms that make their claims to human and civil rights illegible. We conclude by offering testimonies of indigenous migrants that challenge traditional notions of state-based rights.
